Reading for the Million. The Tale of a Leg.

NOVEL MODE OF ADVERTISING -- AN AMU-SING MISTAKE

Soon after the introduction of the celebrated mechanical false legs and arms, a certain Dr. B—opened an office on Broadway, for the purpose of applying them for the bour at of those whom mischances had dismembered.

These appliances we re a very great improvement upor the old-fashioned wooden and cort, legs, and, as a natural consequence, they were eagerly sought for, although their great cost precluded many from possessing these adjuncts to locomotion.

One day Dr. B. was waited upon by a young lady who had hobbled around two years on a cork contrivance, which a railroad accident had compelled her to wear: but the price was far above her means, and so the poor creature her means, and so the poor creature was about to hobble away again, still cork-legged and unrequited, when Dr. B. w.s suddenly harnassed with an idea.

"If you will permit me to refer to the limb," said he, "and will consent to show how well and naturally it works, to those whom I may send to you, I will adjust one of my best patterns for you, without a cent of pay."

The offer was taken into consideration by the young lady and her family, and it was finally agreed to accept the offer, the term of exhibition to extend over a period of three months.

The leg was adjusted, and not only "worked" splendidly, but looked equal to the original; in short, she was able to throw aside her cane and promenade with grace, with only trifling difficulty.

But by-and-by the doctor's customers

But by-and-by the doctor's customers began to come to her for the purpose of examination. At first it was far from being pleasant, but in the presence of her mother and sister the exhibition of the artificial limb ceased to be a bore; and she began to take to it with pride, dressing the inanimate company who had maimed her daugh-

The young lady had by this time learned to treat the whole affair as a matter of business, and when she heard that a caller was waiting in the parlor, she went down as she would have gone upon any other duty.

The young gentleman bowed and blushed as she entered the room, and supposing that he was somewhat confused about making known his errand, she boldly approached it herself.

she boldly approached it herself.
"I suppose you have come to see my leg," she said, drawing a chair up in front of him.

The poor student, if he blushed and stammered before, he was entirely crimson and unspeakable now.

"I—I—" he stammered, and again she came to the reseuc.

"Never mind excuses, it is simply a matter of business," she said, at the same time displaying the limb. "You see I can use it just as well as the other, and very few, if any, would notice the difference. I can assure you "Don't mention it; I am only too happy to show you that all the doctor claims for his limbs is true. I can walk for two miles without experien-cing the least difficulty."

eing the least difficulty."
"But my dear young lady, I wish to see your mother," said the blushing student, the moment he could in the slightest way get command of himself.
"There is no occasion for that, sir;

"There is no occasion for that, sir; she does not wear a leg of this kind," continued the interesting exhibitor.
"But, but—I am Mr. W's clerk—he wished me to—"and casting a side-wished me to—"and casting a sidelong look at the beautifully-rounded mechanism he broke down again.

"Oh, Mr. W. Oh, my! I thought you came from Dr. B., and wished to see my false leg. I beg pardon."
"Oh, there's no occasion for excuses,
I assure you; it is a very natural mistake, and I have boen very delightfully entertained by it."

The young lady retired with any number of blushes, while her mother made the proper excuses and explanations.:

The Tests of Friendship.—The hardest trial to those who fall from affluence and honor to poverty and obscurity, is the discovery that the attachment of so many in whom they had confided was a miserable shallowness. Adversity is a sure test of friendship. Flies leave the kitchen when the dishes are empty; leaves drop off before the breath of winter; ravens desert their banquet at a sudden noise, becoming mere specks on the horizon. Friends such as those are indeed but "summer friends"—mere parasites that cling as long as the sap surges through the tree.

A true friend sits in the centre of the heart, and is for all times. Calamity increases his sympathy; suffering enlarges his charity; adversity does notblunt his consciousness of duty. Our need only reveals him more date that hods they can tell!

see his sympathy; suffering enlarges his charity; adversity does not blunt his consciousness of duty. Our need only reveals him more fully, and binds him more closely to us.—Prosperity and adversity are both revealers, the difference being that in the former our friends know us, and that in the latter we know them. But, notwithstanding the greediness and insincerity prevalent among men, there is; a vast deal more of esteem and fellow yearning than is ever outwardly shown. There are more examples of unadulterated affection, more deeds of silent love and magnanimity than is usually supposed. We are one of those who believe that the world is not quite so bad as misauthropes would make it; if we are wrong, we cannot help it—our opinion carries much satisfaction with it. The world has its snare of boxeous the same of the provolent impulses and generous motivos; and nevolent impulses and generous motives; and ff we fail to observe it, is because, in all pro-bability, that we ourselves are selfish and

TAKE MY HAND, PAPA.—In the dead of of night, I am frequently wakened by a little hand stealing out from the crib by my side, with the pleading cry:

"Please take my hand, papa!"
Instantly the little boy's hand is grasped, his fears vanish, and, soothed by the consciousness of his father's presence, he falls into sweet sleep again.

We commend this lesson of simple, filial faith and trust to the anxious, sorrowing ones, that are found in almost overy household. Strotch forth your hand, stricken mourner, although you may be in the deepest darkness and gloom, and fear and anxious suspense may cloud your weary pathway and that every act will reveal the presence of a loving, compassionate Father, and give you the peace that passeth all understanding.

The darkness may not pass away at once, night may still enfold you in its ambrace, but to terrors may be dissipated, its gloom and sadness fiee away, and in the simple grasp of he Father's hand, sweet peace will be given and you will reet securely, knowing that the 'morning cometh.'

A Vernose preacher in England, who could be found only on Sunday, being obliged to secrete himself during the week to avoid his creditors, was in this wise criticized by a waggish hearer: That man," said he," is inwisible six days of the week, and incomprehensible on the seventh."

On Christmas day the workmen engaged at either, end of the Moot Cenis tunnel metrand clasped hands through the openitage in the solid rock where the two gangs came together in the sucressful prosecution of their stupender, as work. This great tunnel unites France and Italy. It is nearly eight miles long; it passes under three great Alpine mountains, at a depth of 5,484 feet, or more than one mile beneath their loftiest summits, and its cost so far has been 170,000,000 francs with very low wages paid to the workmen. The work was begun in 1857, so that it has taken thirteen years to perforate the mountains, and it will probably require half a year more before it will be ready for railroad travel. It is said that one thousand men were killed by explosions and falling rocks during the thirteen years that the work was progressing. Perforators, driven by compressed air were used to bore the rock, at the rate of nine feet a day. The holes made were then filled with powder, and the blasts touched off by electricity. The stone and dirt had to be removed several miles to get it electricity. The stone and dirt had to be removed several miles to get it land.

The Mount Cenis Tunnel will be entirely in the interests of peace. In case of war between France and Italy it would be useless to either nation, for at either end it could be easily made impassible. Armies would have to cross the Alps as did Hannibal and the first Napoleon, so that the natural barriers, in time of war, would still remain. aver the intrusion of a few serious thoughts, thoughts of the past.

While we make a review of the past twelve months, it passes before the mind like a 'panorama, and here and there we would that the picture of happy recollections might remain awhile; then others we glide swiftly over as being of inferior enjoyment. Time does fly.

How impressive is the thought, when we open a book, and upon the fly-leaf we recognize our scrawl, made some ten, twenty, or fifty years ago!

fly-leaf we recognize our scrawl, made some ten, twenty, or fifty years ago! We remember the day, the hour, all the circumstances of our placing it there. We say, "It seems as though it was only yesterday." The book may be a gift; we prized it and still do prize it, and the "Presented to" awakens a multitude of thoughts. That book we have read and re-read; we have cherished its choice commanion. have cherished its choice companion-ship and that also of the giver. The giver may have gone from us long ago, lost to us in death or in life, still the book remains. Faded it may be, agod and worn, but mellow with time and sacred to memory. We seem to remember more of its contents than we have found to be backet and the member more of its contents than we do of most of our other books, and the pleasure of its perusal often excites us more than anything else.

We mark the places that knew us years ago, but they know us no more. We visit them and changes stare us in the face at every step—crumbling away and rebuilding, clearing out and leveling over seems only to satisfy the tooth of time. Once familiar faces wear an air of failure and sadness, or an assumed cheerfulness with a broken an assumed cheerfulness with a broker heart scarcely able to sustain it. Others hasten to and fro in the busy marts we were wont to traverse. They buy, sell and calculate as did we; their minds are active, their feet are unweathers.

Among the most important changes made in the new tariff, which went info effect on the 1st of January, are the following: Teas, from 25 to 15 cents; coffee, from 5 to 3 cents; new sugar, from 3½ to 1½ cents; sugar above No. 7, from 4 to 2 cents; refined sugar, from 5 to 4 cents; came molasses, from 8 to 5 cents; brandy, from 83 to 82; liquors, from 82 50 to 82 per proof gallon; wool, from 30 per cent. to 11 and 10 cents; steel railway bars, from 2½ and 10 per cent. To 1½ cents; pig iron, from 89 to 87; cast and wrought scrap are each increased $1 per ton. Fiftytwo articles, mostly drugs, are placed on the free list; and the tariff on forty articles reduced.

The welcome news that the last rock of of the Mont Cenis tunnel has been pierced, of the Mont Cenis tunnel has been pierced, and that the workmen from both ends of the mountain have joined each other in congratulations over the event, is announced by cable several days ago. The accomplishment of this great feat in engineering is a greater triumph for France than she has yet won on the battle-field, and one that will be of far more practical advantage to the world. Itay and France are now united, and the dancers of the passnow united, and the dangers of the passage of the Alps forever overcome. The belles of Newport and Saratoga are outdone by the wife of Mehomet All, who required 500 camels to transport her baggage when she went a visiting.

II. T. Helmold, Daugist:

Dear Sir:—I have been a sufferer, for upward of twenty years, with gravel bladder and kidney affections, during which time I have used various medicinal preparations, and have been under the treatment of the most eminent Physicians, experiencing little rolief.

Having seen your preparations extensively advertised, I consulted with my family physician in regard to using your Extract Buchu.

I did this because I had used all kinds of advertised remedies, and had found them worthless, and, some quite injurious; in fact, I despaired of ever getting well, and determined to use no remedies hereafter unless I knew of the ingredients. It was this that prompted me to use your remedy. As you advertised that it was composed of huch; cubebs and juniper berries, it occurred, to me and my physician as an excellent combination, and, with his advice after an examination of the article and consulting again with the druggist, I concluded to try it. I commenced its use about eight months ago, at which time I was confined to my room. From the first bottle I was astonished and gratified at the beneficial effect, and after using it three weeks, was able to walk out. I felt much like writing you a full statement of my case at that time, but thought my improvement might only be a temporary, and therefore concluded to defer and see it if would be of creater value to you, and more satisfactory together a cure is effected after using the much your for five months.

I have not used your for five months.
