

Farm and Household.

Feeding a Variety of Fodder.

Most farmers need line upon line, precept upon precept, in regard to the care required for their domestic animals during the feeding season.

All kinds of domestic animals will thrive far more satisfactorily when a variety of food is provided than when only one kind is dealt out without change.

Large Farms.

One of the rocks on which many fail, is to have too much land. It is much safer to be crowded for room—to have no room to plant anything, as is often remarked—than to be spread out to the extent we commonly see.

For our part, we are in favor of young men starting in life with but little cash capital, buying a farm with some mortgage on it, providing he has a determination to pay that mortgage off as soon as he can turn round.

To Clean a Rusty Plow.

Take a quart of water and pour slowly into it a half a pint of sulphuric acid. The mixture will become quite warm from chemical action, and this is the reason why the acid should be poured slowly into the water rather than the water into the acid.

Farming from the Cities.

It is often asserted that no one can farm successfully without considerable practical knowledge, and that it is not well to encourage people who have been brought up in cities to locate upon the land with any hope of making money thereby.

We do not recommend citizens to go to the country. Only let them not forget that reading is not experience. With a little thought and judgment they will succeed well, and hundreds live to bless the day they settled on the land.—Weekly Press.

Home Weddings.

What scene on earth is fairer than a wedding in the house? There are no weddings like home weddings. The church is better enough for those who cannot do well. But to a child no cathedral can be like that chief and foremost church of the heart, the father's house!

But in America there are no such reasons for resorting to the church. And if there is an act in one's whole life that belongs to home, it is marriage.

Without uncharitableness, it may be feared that too many persons have regard to the show, the brilliant impression made upon the admiring public. If so, the most sacred act of life is bribed by vanity, to serve its mongrel service.

The Doctor.

He should be a man of the strictest honor and integrity, for to him are confided the secrets of families, the honor of wives and daughters—social trusts that are committed to no other.

Dust Under the Microscope.

Among specimens of dust from various localities which we have recently examined under the microscope, one was procured at the Springfield Armory. With a Tolles 1-4 inch objective, the impalpable dust appeared to be composed mostly of fragments of iron and steel, but under the power of a 1-5, the dust was seen to be made up of particles of energy, as well as various kinds of metals.

Discoveries of the Microscope.

Levenhook tells us of an insect seen with the microscope, of which twenty-seven millions would only equal a mite. Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavities of a grain of sand. Mould is a forest of beautiful trees, with the branches, leaves, flowers and fruit.
