In a recent discussion of the Central New York Farmer's Club, as reported in the Utica Herald. Hon. Harris Lewis "spoke of the value of house sewage, a commodity too often wastel; and of the great waste of human exerciment. It should be utilized, and at the same time by using it its paguicupus influence wastel. by using it, its permicious influence would be removed from the wells which too ofter act as drain for it, and from the air, which is unpleasant and unhealthy by its odors. would suggest to every farmer never to chase a commercial fe tilizer as long as purchase a commercial let. tilizer as long as he bad manure wastings on his premises. He recommended the use of plaster on the floor of the stable, or sprinkled on the heaps. Of the application of unitare, Mr. Lows said nature gave us a guide. Nature always applies her fertilizers on the surface. Generally, the cultivator will work it down as deep said could be used to be a surface. Masic.

A Valuable Discovery.

I. F. Huddles in, Fig., a prominent law yer and well-posted citizen of Purdy, are Nairy e-amty, Tenn., informs us that the people of that place, after a series of care-ful tests and experiments, have become far-ly satisfied that the Atlanthus or "Tee or Herven" (a deathys elaphidam), is a surfe-Heiven' (alleathus glandulous) is a sare proventive to murrain in cattle. He says the cattle commonce eating the leaves of the tree about the time in the cason when the marrain would appear, and that none the marrain would appear, and that none having arcess to it have ever been known to take the disease whire others all around have been seriously afflicted. As prand p stive, he refers to a case where against man living in Parly had, under the impression that it injured the mink, scopped his cattle from feeding on the allanthus by keeping them closely pennel at ngint, and driving them beyong the range of its growth each morning. As a consquence they all sekened and died of marcain, while the cattleof his less fieldidus neighbors. cattleof his less fastidious neighbors

This thing is well worth lo king into. It is said that nothing has been created in vain, but we have long been of the opin on that an exception should be made in the case of the allanthus. Now we hope however, that no exception will be necessary. and that all pe ple of good taste will be permitted to view it in the light of a dis-agreeable medicine, rather than a disagree able nuisince.

Selecting Seed Corn.

In selecting seed corn I would sugg seed while st wing it for winter. My mean od is this: - When I am unloading my corn from the wagon to the crib (or cora house), I always do it by hand, and not with a shove), which allows me to throw sound and perfect ears in the crib, my small ears and perfect ears in the crib, my small cars and unsound ones in one bestet, and all large, sound and perfectly filled eur in another basket for seed I store this last away for seed the fall wing year, and imperfects and unsound and perfectly filled eur. Mrs.

F. W. SMITH, Jackson, Mich. A. F. WHEELER, Lima, Ohio.

imperfect and unsound carn I store by it self to feed my cattle through the winer.

The advantage I claim for this mith id is, first, that in handling the corn I have as instead in indicated the corn in have among retunity of loopeding almost every ear, and thereby am enabled to sele t in a short time enough of the largest and most perfect ears for planning; second, I have my unsound corn by listif, and a thing but sound corn in my crib; third, I do not have to go to the crib for my seed when I go to plant, and am not compelled to take almost any sound ear in sight, or turn the erib upside down, hunting for good, large ears; fourth, by so doing I keep my corn up to a standard of excellence for quantity and quality that can tbe attained by any other means—Rural New Yorker.

The Farmers' Club. The club is to the farmer, old or young, a school. He is learning all the time hew to express his views clearly. The views of neighbors draw out new thoughts on new subjects, and these thoughts find expression. Lawyers gain strength by long yors of study, and then practice at the bar. The young lawyer making his first speech is as moserable and as new ward as the young farmer making his first public coordinates and him on to cliort upon effort. The young farmer not feeling the necess ty for this makes no further venture. The saver goes on and becomes famous as a good talker and a fine reasoner. The same practice would have made the young farmer as good a talker, and a stronger, more efficient worker in his field of daty. The experiences of a club of well educated farmers, bring this skill and this strength. We advise the organization of township clubs on the simp of plan. Arrange the meeting to suit the convenience of all parties and let the attendance be as regular as church going. American Farm Journat for November.
