s First Brigade of the Third Division of the feer corps. He was subsequently appointed Brigadier General, to date from May 12, 1864, "for gallant and meritorious services during the war,"

While the country was, late in March, 1865, anticipating news of the fall of Richmond, it was startled by the report that Lee had suddenly assumed the offensive and attacked our lines. But this assault was gallantly and brilliantly repulsed after one of the severest struggles, for its duration, of the war. General Hartranft at the time was in command of the Third Division of the Ninth Corps, which was made up of Pennsylvania regiments, raised for one year and just sent into the field. At the head of this fresh force, Hartranft, on the 25th of March, made an attack upon the Rebel lines and drove the enemy headlong from Fort Steadman, a position which they had fancied to be securely in their grasp. For this brillant acheivement Hartranft was breveted Major General of Volunteers, and became popularly known as "The Hero of Fort Steadman." Subsequently his skirmishers were the first Union soldiers to enter Petersburg, and one of the brigades was also the first body of loyal troops to enter the city. His
