

The Art of Farming.

It is easier to farm well than ill. The man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, and makes every other kind of produce double too, is a happier man than one who toils, doing neither better nor worse than the average; while the miserable mortal who impoverishes his land must feel how degraded a position he stands in, and his mind must sink lower and lower with his property. It is no denying fact, and the truth is starting from the East, the land is robbed of more than half its fertility, and the soil is becoming more and more exhausted.

Whipping Horses.

There are persons who think that the spirit and temper of a horse must be broken to make him valuable. Prof. Wagner, in his work on the "Education of Horses," says: "I would caution those who train or use horses against exciting the ill-will of the animal. Many think they are doing finely, and are proud of their success in horse training, by means of severe whipping, or otherwise rousing and stimulating the passions, and then from necessity, crushing the will through which the resistance is prompted. No mistake can be greater than this; and there is nothing that so fully exhibits the ability, judgment and skill of the real horseman as the care and tact displayed in winning, instead of repelling, the action of the mind. Although it may be necessary to use the whip sometimes, it should always be applied judiciously, and great care should be taken not to rouse the passions or excite the will to obstinacy."

The legitimate and proper use of the whip is calculated to operate upon the sense of fear almost entirely. The affections and better nature must be appealed to in training a horse as well as training a child. A proof given may be intended for the good of the child, but it only only the passions are excited, the effect is depressing and injurious. This is a vital principle, and can be disregarded in the management of sensitive, courageous horses only at the imminent risk of spoiling them. I have known many horses of naturally gentle character to be spoiled by being whipped once, and one horse that was made vicious by being struck with a whip once while standing in his stall. There are instances to show the danger of rough treatment, and the effect that may be easily produced by ill usage, especially with the fine blood horses, and those of a highly nervous temperament. Many other cases might be cited, as such are by no means uncommon. Sensitive horses should never be left after they have been excited by whip or other means until calmed down by rubbing or patting the head and neck, and giving apples, sugar or something of which the animal is fond. Remember, the whip must be used with great care, and it is liable to do mischief, and may cause irreparable injury."

How Soil was Made.

Professor Agassiz says that all the material on which agricultural progress depends are decomposed rocks, not so much those that underlie the soil, but those on the surface, and brought from a considerable distance, and ground to powder by the rasping of the glaciers. Ice, all over the continent, is the agent that has ground out more soil than all other agencies put together. The penetration of water into the rock, frost, running water and baking suns, have done something, but the glaciers have done more. In a former age the whole United States was covered with ice several hundred feet thick, and this moving from north to south by the tropical warmth, or pressing weight of the ice and snow behind, ground the rocks over which it passed into the paste we call soil. These masses of ice can be tracked as game is tracked by the hunter. He has made a study of them in this country as far south as Alabama, but has observed the same phenomenon, particularly in Italy, where among the Alps, glaciers are now in progress. The stones and rocks ground and polished by the glaciers can easily be distinguished from those that are scratched by running water. The angular boulders found in meadows and terraces of rivers not reached by water can be accounted for only in this way.

Irrigating Hill-Sides.

A correspondent of The Country Gentleman, writing from Italy, says: "In the mountainous countries about Como and Maggiore, and also in Switzerland, irrigation is also carried on, but somewhat differently from the ordinary method. A mountain stream which passes through a farm is dammed up every few yards, and the water by backing up into ditches cut at right angles to the stream, overflows the field which lies down hill from the ditch, and so on till it reaches its proper bed again in the valley below. This more primitive mode of irrigation could be resorted to at comparatively small expense on any of our hilly farms which have a stream running through them. In other parts of Europe I have seen artificial wells with a horse-power pump answer the same purpose."

Removing Ink.

"How can I take it out of a carpet?" asks a correspondent. If freshly spilled, sponge up all you can, and put cold water on repeatedly, taking up the spot with a mite as possible. Then rub the spot with a little wet oxalic acid, or salt of sorrel, and wash off with cold water, and rub on some hartshorn.
