PAMPHLETS, and it is very gratifying to me to know that you hold me in such high esteem; but I cannot accede to your proposal—I am engaged to another."

"Well, sir, as you please," said Mr.

George continued to attend to business closely, but his evenings were generally his own, and then, when Jenny was not busy, of course they had delightful times. Jenny was not by any means without of the admirers. Many a young man in the neighborhood would discommode himself much to accommodate her, and consider himself well paid if he could thus win a smile, or "thank you" from her sweet lips.

But George was her favorite lover, and he sedulously improved his opportunities until finally it was whispered around, and pretty freely, too, that he and Jenny were engaged. Such reports always spread like, wildire, and this one was not long in reaching the ears of Mr. Moore, one of his employers.

Mr. Moore had a daughter who took a fanny to our friend, and he was aware of it, but could not reciprocate the compliment. Her father also knew that George was a smart fellow, and would, as he often said, "make a stir in the world." He thot't that George and his daughter would feel highly complimented at the proposal. Therefore, soon after Mr. Moore first heard the foregoing report, he called George to himself; wild fire, and this one was not long in reaching the engaged. Such reports always spread like wild her and the sone was not long in reaching the most of the correct of the congrigation of the congression of the congrigation of the congression of the congression of the congression of the congrigation of the congression of t have $2,340 in twenty years—quite a snug little fortune. Ten cents before breakfast, dinner and supper—thirty cents a day. It would buy a book for the children. $2 10 per week, enough to pay for a year's subscription to a good newspaper. $109 50 per year—with it you could buy a good melodeon, from which you could procure sweet music, to pleasantly while away the vening hours. And this amount invested as before would in forty years produce the desirable amount of $15,000.
