Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be lawful for the Western Illinois Bridge Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Missouri, to build a bridge across the Mississippi river at the place hereinafter mentioned, for the purpose of crossing persons and property, such as are usually crossed on wagon bridges; and also to lay on and over the same a railway-track for the more perfect connection of any roads that are or shall be constructed to the said river, or at opposite said points, and that, when constructed, all persons and property as aforesaid, and also all trains and roads terminating at said river, at or opposite said points, shall be allowed to cross said bridge for a reasonable compensation, to be made to the owners of said bridge, under the limitations and conditions hereinafter provided; and in case of any litigation or alleged obstruction to the free navigation of said river, the cause may be tried before the district court of the United States of any State in which any such alleged obstruction or bridge touches; and that all railway companies desiring to use the said bridges shall have and be entitled to equal rights and privileges in the use of the same, and in the use of the machinery and fixtures thereof, and of all the approaches thereto, under and upon such terms and conditions as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of War, upon hearing the allegations and proofs of the parties, in case they shall not agree.

Sec. 2. That said bridge may, at the option of the company building the same, be built either as a trestle bridge, or as a suspension bridge, or as a combination of the two, and that the length of the bridge shall be made with unbroken or continuous spans, it being the duty of the company to make the same at least fifty feet above high-water mark, understood at the point of location, to the bottom chord of the bridge, nor shall the spans of said bridge be less than two hundred and fifty feet in length, and the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of the river, and the main span shall be over the main channel of the river, and not less than three hundred feet in length: And provided also, That if said bridge shall be constructed as a pivot bridge, the same shall be constructed so as to draw over the main channel of the river at an accessible and navigable point, and with spans not less than one hundred and sixty feet in length, in the clear, on each side of the central or pivot piers of the draw; and the next adjoining spans of the draw shall not be less than two hundred and fifty feet, if the proper location of the draw over the channel will admit spans of this width between and above the shore, and said spans shall not be less than thirty feet above low-water mark, and not less than ten feet above extreme high-water mark, measured to the bottom chord of the bridge, and the piers of said bridge shall be parallel with the current of the river: And provided also, That said draw shall be opened promptly upon reasonable signal, for the passage of the boats whose construction shall not be such as to admit of their passing under the bridge, and that the same shall be opened, except when trains are passing over the same; and in no case shall unnecessary delay occur in opening the draw, and the same shall be kept open, except when trains are passing over the same.

The Muses' Bower.

Rain Upon the Roof.

When the humid shadows hover

Over all the starry spheres,

And the melancholy darkness

Softly seeps in rainy tears,

'Tis a joy to press the pillow

Of a cottage chamber bed,

And to listen to the patter

Of the soft rain overhead.

Every tinkle on the shingles

Has an echo in the heart;

And a thousand dreamy fancies

Into busy being start.

And a thousand recollections

Weave their bright rays into woe,

As I listen to the patter

Of the soft rain upon the roof.

Now in fancy comes my mother

With her sweet, delicate voice,

To survey her darling dreamer,

Ere she left them till the dawn.

Oh, how I long to see her

As I list to this refrain

Which is played upon the shingles

By the patter of the rain.

Then my little nephews stir

With their sweet, childish glee,

And their bright-eyed cherub hair—

A serene, angelic pair.

Oh, how I long to see them

As I list to this refrain

Which is played upon the shingles

By the patter of the rain.

And another comes to thrill me

With her sweet, delicate voice,

And forgot I, gazing on her,

That her heart was all untrue!

With a rapture akin to pain,

And my heart's quick pulses vibrate

To the patter of the rain.

There is naught in Art's bravuras

That can work such sweet appeal

In the spirit's pure, deep fountains,

Whence the holy passions well,

As that melody of nature,

That sweet, melodious strain

Which is played upon the shingles

By the patter of the rain.

How softly on the bruised heart.

And to the dry and parched soil

The moistening tear-drop calls;

Oh, they knew who walked the earth

'Mid sorrow, grief and pain,

The power a word of kindness hath,

'Tis to begeth again.

The weakest and the poorest may

Begeth the seed of good,

And bid delight to withered hearts,

Return again to life:

Oh, what a life it love to best!

If man's unkind to man,

Oh, what the heaven that waits beyond,

This brief and mortal span?

As stars upon the tranquil sea

In mid night show their light,

So words of kindness in the heart

Reflect the soul's divine;

Oh, then be kind who's thus art,

And it shall brighten all thy life,

And sweeten even death.

The Story-Teller.

Walter Gordon's Resolution.

BY HORATIO ALGER, JR.

STEP BY STEP, Walter Gordon had sunk

from a position of respectability to that of a confirmed inebriate. When he commenced visiting the tavern at which liquor was dealt out, he did so with a feeling of shame,

which led him to go at a time when he was likely to meet few persons.

But as time went on, he became more and more reckless of public opinion, and gradually his income from his business—

he was a carpenter—diminished; people being afraid to trust him with commissions, for they would probably have to wait a longer time than was convenient.

Walter was a married man. At the age of twenty-five he had united himself to an attractive girl, who, though she brought him little in the way of worldly goods, proved an excellent wife.

the landlord to break with him. That he would defer until his victim was completely ruined, and there was no prospect of his squeezing any more money out of him.

One night Walter Gordon had remained in the bar-room longer than usual. He remained until all his companions had
