

Stacking Grain.

Bad stacking is the cause of most of the really damaged grain in the market. To stack well, follow these directions: Lay your stack on as level ground as it is possible to find, say on the top of a little hill, which top is generally flat. Commence in the middle setting up the bundles as for a "shock," build all around until you get a large a bottom as is desired. Now commence on the outside layers, having the butts of the bundles about even with the bottom or a little farther out if the grain is damp. When this row is formed lay the second with the butts four or six inches of the bands of the first row, and so on until you get filled up. If you find the middle getting too full, lay them in a little further. Here let no caution all against filling up the middle of the stack with loose or broken bundles; if you have such, bind them up or lay them on the outside, for the middle of the stack must be solid. Don't walk any further toward the outside of the stack than is really necessary. When you come to topping out the stack, be careful to keep the middle well filled up, and the outside as even as you can; but mind you don't get as much as one bundle with the heads the lowest; if such places occur, lay some bundles on the inside, filling up the hollow before laying the outside ones, for one bundle pitching the wrong way often lets in a great deal of water. In finishing when you have no more middle to fill, keep in the centre, laying a bundle wherever the butts will be the lowest, until completely topped out. Force a long, nicely trimmed stake down well into the stack, to keep the wind from blowing off the top.—Cor. Prairie Farmer.

Girdling Limbs for Fruit.

A correspondent of the Hartford Courant, after giving some directions in regard to the care of fruit trees, removing grass and weeds from the roots, manuring the soil, washing the bodies with soapuds, adds:

"If you wish to retain the blossoms in the shape of fruit, girdle the limbs. It has been tried and found to be a perfect success. In 1868, Mr. P. R. Russell, then of Bolton, Mass., selected five healthy trees of different varieties, and when in bloom, girdled a large limb on each. Those limbs had double the fruit to be found on other equal parts of the same trees, and the apples were much larger and smoother. In 1870 he repeated the experiment with the same success. The trial was made the same season on Dr. Crook's farm in Bolton, and with a like effect. Mr. Russell, removing to Vineland, N. J., treated his trees in the same way, and was again rewarded with apples large and fair, that clung with tenacious grip to their branches. The philosophy is simple. Insects sting the fruit, which, becoming sickly, drops to the ground. In the spring, the sap goes up the woody fiber of the tree, but returns in the bark. Girdle the bark, while the tree is in blossom or soon after, and the sap cannot return till autumn, at which time the girdled parts will have healed; hence the limbs, thus full of sap, will have virtually enough to retain the fruit. The channel around the limbs, made with a penknife, clean through the bark, should be small, about half the width of a pipe-stem."

How to Wash Summer Suits.

Summer suits are nearly all made of white or buff linen, pique, cambric, or muslin, and the art of preserving the new appearance after washing is a matter of the greatest importance. Common washers-women spoil everything with soda, and nothing is more frequent than to see the delicate tints of lawns and percales turned into dark blotches and muddy streaks by the ignorance and vandalism of laundress. It is worth while for ladies to pay attention to this, and insist upon having their summer dresses washed according to the directions which they should be prepared to give their laundress themselves. In the first place, the water should be tepid, the soap should be not be allowed to touch the fabric; it should be washed and rinsed quick, turned upon the wrong side, and hung in the shade to dry, and when starched (in this boiled, but not boiling, starch) should be folded in sheets or towels and ironed on the wrong side as soon as possible. But linen should be washed in water in which hay or a quart bag of bran has been boiled. This last will be found to answer for starch as well, and is excellent for print dresses of all kinds, but a handful of salt is very useful also to set the colors of light fabrics and dotted lawns; and a little ox gall will not only set but brighten yellow and purple tints, and has a good effect upon green.

Apples.

With the use of the apple, as an article of food, is far underrated. Besides containing a large amount of sugar, mucilage and other nutritive matters, apples contain vegetable and aromatic qualities, etc., which act powerfully in the capacity of refrigerants, tonics and antiseptics, and when freely used at the season of mellow ripeness they prevent biliousness, indigestion, and avert, without doubt, many of the "chills that flesh is heir to." The operators of Cornwall, England, consider ripe apples as nearly as nourishing as bread, and far more so than potatoes. In the year 1801—which was a year of much scarcity—apples, instead of being converted into cider, were sold to the poor, and the laborers asserted that they could "stand their work" on baked apples without meat, whereas potato diet required either meat or some other substantial nutriment. The Germans and French use apples exclusively; so do the inhabitants of all European nations. The laborers depend upon them as an article of food, and frequently make a dinner of sliced apples and bread. There is no food cooked in as many different ways in our country as apples, nor is there any fruit whose value as an article of nutriment is as great and so little appreciated.
