EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BADA, ILL., Oct. 28, 1872. We left Plano on Friday last, and rolled down to this place, an important station on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Here we were met at the station by John Dickey, Esq., and members of his family, and escorted to their neat and comfortable home. Mr. Dickey, as I said in my former letter, is a native of Huntingden county, where quite a number of his relatives now reside. He spent many years of his active life in Woodberry, Bedford county, and from thence, some thirteen years ago, he removed to this place where he is prospering.

I promised, in my last, that I would give my readers some idea of Plano and its peculiarities. I will do so. Plano is a village of about 700 inhabitants, located on the C. B. & Q. R. R., about fifty-five miles from Chicago. Here is located one of the largest Reaper manufacturing establishments in the country, owned by Marsh, Steward & Co. The machine manufactured here is almost unknown to our farmer in the East, though Mr. Steward informed me that an effort has been made to manufacture them in the Middle States. The machine is called the "Marsh Harvester," and has been perfected by Mr. Marsh. It has undergone many improvements, until now it is almost perfect. Last year the establishment turned out 1400 of them, and the demand was far from being supplied. This year 2000 will be turned out and arrangements are being made to marufacture them on a still more extensive scale. The following are the principal paints claimed for the "Harvester":

2d. The binding can be done in better order, and the grain saved cleaner than where it is thrown on the ground before binding.

3d. The Harvester is simple in construction, having only half the amount of gearing of the common Reaper.

4th. The Harvester is light running. The testimony of all who have used the Harvester agrees upon this point. It is explained by its large carrying wheels, simple construction and complete balance. It has no side draft, and turns as easily as east, and costs nothing for renairs.

Plano has three churches-Methodist, There is a colony of several hundred of the latter under the ministration of Prophet Joe Smith, the younger, son of the Prophet Joe who was killed at Nauvoo, in Hancock county. They repudiate polygamy and conduct themselves as good and commendable citizens. Smith publishes a paper called the Latter Day Saints' Herald, which has quite a circulation, I am told, among the various societies of the country.

The country around Plano is an excellent quality of prairie, and produces very prolifically. Corn is raised in great abundance. It is a mere drug at present; not worth more than fifteen cents a bushel .-Fruit is also being raised in large quantities. After leaving Plano south-west the prairie stretches out, on either hand of the railroad, as far as the eye can distinguish. Splendid farms dot the surface at intervals of every few hundred yards. Large numbers of cattle are being raised for the market and can be seen grazing lazily on almost every farm. The farmers have concluded that nothing pays them so well as stock. Into it they can feed their surplus corn, and as stock always finds a ready sale, at fair prices, they can realize their money out of their crops sooner in this way than in any other. Almost every farm you pass has one or two of Perkins' self-regulating wind-mills for pumping water. It is a very handsome machine, and presents a Sandwich, Ill.

At Wyanet the country becomes quite rolling, and continues so until we reach Buda. A number of groves strike out boldly into the prairie and change the en

Buda is a village of 1200 or 1500 inhabitants. It contains four churches-Methodist, Congregationalist, Baptist and Union-and one very fine Common School . The repair shops of the C. B. Greenawalt, D. & Q. R. R. and its Rushville branch are located here and employ quite a number of hands. One of the most interesting fea tures of the place is Mr. Dickey's apiary. Republicans....
