Farm and Household. When Should a Farmer Sell His Pro-

One of the most successful farmers and merchants that ever lived in this vicinity—long since dead—is credited with having said that a farmer should sell his produce as soon as it is ready for market. The principal reason he gave was, that when the farmer held the produce over from one season to another, or even for a shorter period, that he then became a speculator in addition to his being a producer, and that the two are inconsistent. The farmer raises his produce for the market, and when it is really for it then is the time to sell. The mency he realizes for a crop can always be used to an advantage in some other way than that of holding grain. It requires the very finest mind to become a successful speculator.

A writer compares the educated merchant to Isaac Newton. He says the same understanding Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had not calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant extending Newton had not calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant e problems are the most difficult to solve, as the circumstances are not derived from contribute its fruits and cereals. the circumstances are not derived from the invariable laws of nature, while the systems of the geometricians are. The problems of the merchant depend upon the caprices of men, and upon the certainty or uncertainty of a thousand events. He takes in at one view the whole world, and directs his operations by an infinite variety of considerations, which it is seldom the province of the statesman or philosopher to estimate. Nothing must escane the province of the statesman or philosopher to estimate. Nothing must escape the trader. He must foresee the influence to the greatness of the nation of which she is a harmonious part.

To make the Centennial Celebration the trader. He must foresee the influence of the season upon the plenty, the scarcity and quality of commodities. He must know the effect of political affairs upon those of commerce, the changes which war or peace must necessarily occasson in the quantity and choice of provisions, in the state of the markets in the cities and ports of the world. He must look to the stagnation or impetus that may be produced by the blocking up or opening of some channels of industry or wealth. He must learn the reciprocal connection there is between most branches of trade, and the mutual assistance they lend, by the temptage of the scan of the stagnation of their respective States and Territories.

To make the Centennial Celebration such a success as the patriotism and the pride of every American demands will require the co-operation of the whole country. The United States Centennial Commission has received no Government aid, such as England extended to her World's Fair, and France to her Universal Exposition, yet the labor and responsibility imposed upon the Commission of dollars will be required, and this sum Congress has provided shall be raised by stock subscription, and that the people of the whole country. hemp crop, becuase he said it was not enough and he would get more; but he was mistaken, and afterward sold the same crop for five dollars per hundred. He lost fifty per c nt. of the price offered and one year's interest on the capital. In nine cases out of ten a farmer who holds his produce over will meet with a similar result. We are thoroughly convinced that the time to sell produce is when it is ready for market.—Farmers' Home Journal.

Numerous experiments have been made on zeese, ducks, pigs, becs, &c., which go to prove that these animals accumulate much more fat than can be accounted for by the quantity present in the food. M. Florens had the bears in the Jardin des Plantes fed exclusively on bread, and they become excessively fat. Bees confined to a diet of purified sugar continue to produce wax, which strictly belongs to the group of fats. But, whatever its source, the exa diet of parified sugar continue to produce wax, which strictly belongs to the group of fats. But, whatever its source, the excessive use of non-nitrogenous food, conjoined with inactivity, frequently leads to the deposit of an inordinate amount of oleaginous matter. This fact is illustrated by numerous, instances both among the lower animals and among man. At Strasbourg the geese are fattened by shutting them up in darkened coops within a heat-

AN ACT supplementary to an act entitled "An act to aid in the construction of tolegraph lines, and to secure to the government the use of the same for postal, mili ary, and other purposes," approved July kwenty-fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty six.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representations of the Cables on Sinabel size, and the security of the capital states of the capital state Originating under the auspices of the National Legislature, controlled by a Navional Commission, and designed as it is to "Commemorate the first Century of our existence, by an Exhibition of the National resources of the Country and their devel pment, and of our progress in those Arts which benefit mankind, in comparison with those of older Nations," it is to the people at large that the Commission look for the aid which is necessary to make the Centennial Celebration the grandest anniversary the world has ever seen.

That the completion of the first century of our existence should be marked by some imposing demonstration is, we believe, the other way than that of holding grain. It requires the very finest mind to become a successful speculator.

A writer compares the educated merchant to Isaac Newton. He says the same understanding Newton had to calculate the motions of the stars, the merchant exerts in tracing the actions of the commercial people that fertilize the earth. His problems are the most difficult to solve, as problems are the most difficult to sol mutual assistance they lend, by the temporary injuries they seem to inflict on each other. He must know the proper time to begin, and the time to top, in all undertakings. In a word, he must possess the art of making all other nations tributary earnestly urge the formation in each State. arnestly urge the formation in each State and Territory of a centennial organization, with that of his own country, or rather, to enrich himself by extending the general prosperity of mankind.

These are the objects which constitute the profession of the true merchant. If, then, these are the characteristics of the merchant, cannot every one see how much the farmer undertakes when he becomes both a farmer and a merchant—when he speculates on what he produces? We know a farmer of Fayette county who refused ten dollars per hundred for his hemp crop, because he said it was not
