The Horse Malady.

The Science of Health says: "If any one can understand how a human being, suffering of a bad cold, with cough, nasal discharge, pain in the chest, and soreness of the throat, should be treated, he ought to know how to manage a horse affected with the same symptoms. True, we cannot administer the warm foot-bath, the vapor bath, nor the sweating pack, so conveniently to horses, nor is it necessary, as the horse is accustomed to more simple habits, and can live without artificial heat, more simple remedies will answer. But any animal, when sick, can be treated hygienically, and that is all that is necessary. We can at least follow the good advice which Hippocrates gave more than two thousand years ago: 'If you cannot do any good, you can at least avoid doing harm.' We can refuse to bleed, withhold the drugs, and give nature a chance. The sick horse should have a clean room away from the mistiness of the stable, protected from chilling winds, but with an abundant supply of fresh air. Once a day the whole surface should be sponged with tepid water; and rubbed thoroughly dry with flannel cloths, and afterwards covered with a warm blanket. He may drink as much pure water, but not very cold, as he will; do not force or coax him to eat until he inclines to. Keep a few good carrots and apples before him constantly. They are better medicine than anything that can be found, in the drug shop."—American Farmer's Advocate.

Sound Ideas on Farming.

The following views on farming were thrown out by Mr. Greeley in his speech at Baltimore, and they so entirely cover the ground of successful culture that we give them a place for the benefit of our readers: 1. That the area under cultivation should be within the limits of the capital and labor employed; or, in other words, that on impoverished soils no one should cultivate more land than he can enrich with manure and fertilizers, be it one acre or twenty. 2. That there should be a law compelling every man to prevent his stock from degrading on his neighbor's fields. 3. That green soil is more economical than loose pasturage. 4. That deep tillage is essential to good farming. 5. That the muck heap is the farmer's bank, and that everything should be added to it that will enlarge it, and increase at the same time its fertilizing properties. 6. That no farmer or planter should depend upon one staple alone, but should seek to secure himself against serious loss in bad seasons by diversity of products.

Feeding Stock.

What sorts have been fed to calves to some extent. If the calves have plenty of good, bright, fine, early cut hay, they will need but few shorts. If the hay or other fodder is poor, more shorts should be given; but even then care should be taken, as the shorts may do too loosening. A little corn or other meal mixed with the shorts may be an improvement. A quart of shorts a day may be as much as is worth the price to feed, and this is probably more than would be needed with good hay. If more is desired, I think it would be better to put a little meal with the shorts.

Shorts have been fed to sheep, but I think grain is generally preferred. Corn, peas, and oats are all fed here; but the most corn is fed; perhaps it is the most grown and the handiest to feed sheep. Still peas are excellent feed, and so is a mixture of peas and oats, or corn and oats.—Country Genl.

Late Broods of Chickens.

Many hens, especially cunning old ones, start their nests late in the season, and perhaps about the middle of August come off with broods of chickens. They are too often neglected or as they get large enough for boiling just as cold weather comes on, are ruthlessly slaughtered. From the fear that they will not winter well. If cared for, and kept growing during the winter, they will the summer prove the most valuable fowls on the farm, since they are enjoying laying about the time the other ones cease, and furnish plenty of eggs just when they are most wanted, and most appreciated. Every farmer should save one or more late broods of chickens, in order to prolong the laying season in the summer.

Home-Made Yeast.

Boil two handfuls of hops, which should be tied in a small bag, in six quarts of water; then slice six large potatoes and boil them with the hops; when they are soft skin them out and mash them perfectly fine; add to them one and a half pints of wheat flour, stirred to a smooth batter with cold water; turn off the whole of the boiling hop liquor, first take out the bag and squeezing it dry; then hang it aside to save another time, for it will make two batches of yeast. Stir into this mixture two table-spoonfuls of sugar, one of ginger and one of salt. When milk-warm, add a teaspoonful of yeast, set in a warm place to rise, and it will be ready to put in a jug by the next night or morning.

Preserving Peach Trees.

It is a general complaint that peach trees, after producing a few crops, not only cease bearing, but perish in a short time; whereas the natural life is fifty or sixty years or more. Dr. Wood communicates the result of some experiments, which, he thinks, furnishes a key to unlocking this mystery, and affording peach growers a remedy for the early loss of their trees. He believes this defective power of growth is owing to a lack of potash in the soil, and he assures us, that if alkali is supplied to the tree so that it shall reach the small roots and be absorbed, the fruit bearing power is restored, and the fruit itself revived.

WISHART'S PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL. NATURE'S GREAT REMEDY FOR THE THROAT AND LUNGS.

It is gratifying to us to inform the public that Dr. L. Q. C. Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, for Throat and Lung Diseases, has gained an enviable reputation from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, and from thence to some of the first families in Europe, not through the press alone, but by persons throughout the States actually benefited and cured at his office. While he publishes here, so say our reporters, he is unable to supply the demand. It gains and holds its reputation.—First, Not by stopping cough, but by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected about the throat and bronchial tubes, which causes irritation. Second, It removes the cause of irritation (which produces cough) of the mucous membrane and bronchial tubes, assists the lungs to act and throw off the unhealthy secretions, and purifies the blood. Third, It is free from opium, belladonna, ipecac and opium, of which most throat and lung remedies are composed, which they cough out, and disorganize the stomach. It has a soothing effect on the stomach, acts on the liver and kidneys, and lymphatic and nervous regions, thus reaching to every part of the system, and in its invigorating and purifying effects it has gained a reputation which it must hold above all others in the market.
