THE FARMERS AND THE JUDICIANY.

The FARMERS AND THE JUDICIANY.

The New York Daily Graphic, of June 9, 1873, says: It is easy to condem to the farmers for presuming to question a decision of the Supreme Court, and electing a judge for the awowd purpose of reconsidering that decision; and many influential journals have inconsiderately yielded to the temptation. But when the choice of judge was taken from the Governor and given to the people, they were invited to pronounce upon the decisions as well as the character of the Bench. Their action in this instance is perfectly legitimate.—

Moreover, the ground on which an elective judiciary has been defended is, that whell is instance is preferred. The provised evidence of judgiciary has been defended is, that whell is instance is preferred to the temptate on the farmers for presum on which as lective of pronounce upon the decisions are not one-tenth of the time to in this instance is perfectly legitimate.—
Moreover, the ground on which an elective judiciary has been defended is, that whell is altered and as Mr. Brewster supports of presum of the propose of reconsion why he should be sent to the U. S. Senate, again to make official business for which he was libration. The following the example of the pronounce upon the decisions are not occurred to the continued:
