Sweetly illustrating
Innocent childhood!
Shy as an antelope,
Brown as a berry, Free as the mountain air Romping and merry!

Blue eyes and hazel eyes
Peep from the hedges,
Shaded by sun-bonnets
Frayed at the edges!
Up in the apple trees,
Heedless of danger,
Manhood in embryo Manhood in embryo Stares at a stranger.

Out in the hilly patch, Seeking for berries; Under the orchard tree Down 'mong the grasses; No voice to hinder them.

Dear lads and lasses! Dear little innocents, Born in the wildwood : O that all little ones
Had such a childhood!
God's blue spread over them, God's green beneath them;
No sweeter heritage
Could we bequeath them!
—Rural New Yorker.

Young Stock in Fall and Winter.

The time has arrived when young stock is to be seen to. Winter will soon be here, and the long, cold rains and wet snows of autumn are impending. Are we going to keep out, as is so much the case, our tegs, calves and young colts, till the snow forces them to shelter? Quite likely, the most of us. And what will be the result? It will be not only a lessening of the flesh, but a check in the growth, which can never be remedied. On this point we are very heedless-many of us ignorant. We act to the mature cows horse or sheep or any other stock. And if left out now in the same one thouse the mature cows horse or sheep or any other stock. And if left out now in the same one thouse the mature cows horse or sheep or any other stock. And if left out now in the same of the mature cows horse or sheep or any other stock. faded toward the last, this-will surely, and to a considerable extent, be the case.

Thus hous-dollars; ed, and not crowded, the little company will enjoy it, and continue to thrive uninterruptedly if the right feed be given .-The same will do pretty much for the three, the tegs, the calves and the colts, and that is, in effect, a continuation of the grass or gate keeper and detective, one the senger for the office of the comm summer feed, dried grass hay, dried when green and tender. Nothing is better than aftermath for this young stock, unless it is early cut clover. The two together we have found to work as well as anything.—

The substance and effect are about the substance and effect are about the same.

ook, one hundred and forty dollar; assist dess, one hundred and sixty dollars; assist dess, one hundred and sixty dollars; thief has more so than grass itself, grass advanced in its growth, which has a less influence in this direction than the more tender growth, unch as pasture generally for the general was a pasture general was a pastur this direction than the more tender growth, such as pasture generally furnishes? No one would object to have pasture continued during the winter if this could be, as is during the winter if this could be, as is the case in some parts of the country where cattle and sheep subsist on grass round. But some people are hard to convince; they are those that come in last to adopt the improvements; and thus they lose the benefit which others have reaped in the meantime.

It is gratifying to see the advance young stock will make during the winter if properly fed and taken care of. They will come out strong, active, and greatly grown. Such heifers will be cows at two years, and make the better cows for it; otherwise they would be apt to lose a year, which would be a year's loss of feed and care, and the animals not the better. The tegs will have grown into sheep, wool long, glossy and thick; and the colt, hearty and nimble, will have made rapid advance, which it could never have reached with bad treatment and, neglect; the loss would have been seen in the future horse, and in so valued an animal would have been considerable, and therefore cannot be afforded, especially if the animal be a choice one.

A word as to feeding. We find it best fer young stock to feed often and little at a time. They will then eat up clean, thus preventing waste and the habit of loathing their food, which last is apt to be the case where the remains of a large feed are much breathed over. The cost to winter young stock is thus reduced to a comparatively low figure .- F. G., in Country Geneleman

Freezing will not Kill Cured Corn.

I wish in this to correct the erronecu idea going the rounds of the press. It is popularly supposed that a temperature of four degrees below zero will kill the germ four degrees below zero will kill the germ of corn. This is not so, my corn was exposed to twenty-two degrees below zero-last winter, and every kernel grow. The trouble generally comes in autumn. The farmer delays husking his corn till a cold rain comes on, ending with a snow storm and freeze. The corn not yet thoroughly cured in the shock, is first saturated by the rain and then frozen and the germ is killed. Corn husked and thoroughly cured before cold weather comes on, may be carbefore cold weather comes on, may be carried to the North Pole and brought back. and planted, and I will warrant it to grow
