LOCAL OPTION.

A correspondent from Harrisburg to one of the leading daily newspapers, published in Pittsburgh, said a few days ago, in a communication, that the greatest contest in the Legislature of our State, during the present session, would be over the repeal of the law known familiarly as the "Local Option" act. or against temperance, or the propriety, or on Wednesday last, in Philadelphia. impropriety, of the old license system; we sitating say, that the Local Option act is the fairest way of settling the temperance question. It is in full accord with our republican system—giving to the majority the right to rule. There cannot be a plausible argument made against the expressed voice of the majority of the voters in a county, settling the question whether licenses shall or shall not be granted to sell liquor, as well as to choose their county officers and vote generally.

One of the reasons urged for the repeal of the law is that there was not a fair expression of the voice of the people in the ounties that voted down license, because there was not a full vote polled. For the same reason the friends of the law have a right to say that there was not a fair expression of the voice of the people in the counties that voted in favor of license .-The only fair rule is that those who vote have a right to govern, and those who neglect to vote are estopped from complainman. "Who would you have had?" asked the Ohio of twenty-five cents will be charged counties that voted in favor of license.

The couple fair pels is that those we vote have a right to govern, and those who not pellet to voter extenped from complaining, became they neglected a plain duty as well as waived their right to expess their opinions on an important issue.

Betanouter fair proposition, with regard to those not voting at an election, is the proposition, with regard to those not voting at an election, is the proposition will be a proposition of the pellet control of the pellet c granting of license. The aggregate vote on the new constitution, in the district, is 10,495, and the majority for it in the district is 5,323, every county giving a majority for it.

This expression of the people on the Constitution may stand for ages—it must stand until the people, by vote, change it. Why then should not the voice of the people in these counties, stand as the law for three years on the question of license or no license, and until the people reverse their decision at the polls? The counties that voted for license will not be injured by permitting the counties that voted against license trying the experiment for three years. The friends of temperance, in the counties that voted for license, are not asking to have a vote again, until the three years expire, and we think the friends of the license be dissolved—The State Editorial Association. It is decidedly more ornaficental than useful. We have to see the first good thing come out of it yet. The majority appears to be made up of the same class of impracticables that usually control the State Temperance Associations. On a motion to dissolve we vote, Aye!

The Chief Justice—Blackwell's Island and Tweed Labor—The New Religious Movement.

The Chief Justice-Bickewis Alama and Theea Labor-The New Religious Movement.

NEW York, January 31, 1874.

The appointment of Morrison R. Waite, of Obio, to the Chief Justiceship, meets with favor at the hands of the best citizens of New York. True, the average New Yorker would have been better pleased had some man better known, or rather more widely known, been selected; but as Mr. Waite came to them heavily endorsed, they accepted him gladly. Anybody but Cushing. Speaking about "well-known," the New York as steemed by New Yorkers as capable of doing anything, and as fit for any position under the stars. I heard an amusing colloquy between an Ohio man, who had had "the mere local reputation" of Mr. Waite thrown at him still he was tired of it, by one of these metrolocal reputation" of Mr. Waite thrown at him till he was tired of it, hy one of these metro-duties of hospital-orderly. What an episode in the political anuais of New York! Wm. M. Tweed, who ruled us all, who gave and took away, whose statue was to decorate our public squares, brought up a felon on the very boat which had so often borne him and his retainers of the Americus Olub as distinguished visitors to the island, tumbled into the bath-tub by a man whom he had himself appointed, shaved, cropped, clothed in stripes and cast into a cell six feet by four! There is a funny side to this as to everything else. Upon the card which hangs over Tweed's bod, like those of the other convicts, his occupation is given as "statesman,"—an unintended satire.

But I have dwelt too long upon the institutions of this island. They are admirably managed, and, for a wonder honestly managed,—Dr. A. E. Macdonald, a man of not more than thirty-eight, is the chief of staff in the hospitals, and to him the credit for the perfection of the management is entirely due. He is devoted to his profession, and hoth in medicine and surgery ranks with the ablest and best in the country. He is a man of wonderful attainments, which, combined with great executive ability, makes him emphatically the man for the place.

The members of the convention were then individually introduced to the President by Gen, Eaton. Several of them expressed their thanks to the President for the attention which he gave the subject of education in his last annual message, and said they regarded that as an evidence of the deep interest he takes in the promotion of education among the people. Among the prominent objects of the Convention was an affort to secure greater uniformity in the systems of education throughout the country; reach the youth not yet under instruction, and to give more attention to securing correct statistical information upon the condition, &c., of the schools throughout the country, to be published and distributed the countrion, &c., of the sensors throughout the country, to be published and distributes from year to year by the Bureau of Education at Washington.
