The PRESERVATION OF FOREST TREES.
The public are very justly becoming alarmed at the rapid disappearance of our forests, and many suggestions are offered from time to time as to the best mode of keeping up the supply of wood. On Thursday President Grant transmitted to Congress a memorial upon the supply of wood. On Thursday President Grant transmitted to Congress a memorial upon the supply of wood. On Thursday President Grant transmitted to Congress a memorial upon the cultivation of timber and the preservation of forests, and a draft of a joint resolution prepared by the American Association for the Advancement of Science; together with a commanication from Mr. Drummond, Commissioner of the General Land Office, on the subject. The joint resolution provides that the President shall appoint some person of approved scientific attainments, "Commissioner of succeptance of such Commissioner to ascertain the annual continuation of timber, the best means adapted to its preservation, the influence of forests on the climate, and other facts which he may deem necessary to report to Congress.

**BOCIETY AT REST.** Times adds that Lord Lennox will be Commissioner of Works and Buildings; Captain Stanley, Under Secretary for War; Sir John Charles Hoy, Secretary to Admiralty, and Lord Hamilton, Under Secretary for the Foreign Department. It is learned and society will have forty days rest from its incessant follies. too largely made up of titled gentlemen to be generally popular.

We feel somewhat outraged at the conduct of the House of Representatives, of Pennsylvania, for not passing the Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Commonwealth to pay the printers for publishing the New Constitution. There appears to be a disposition, at Harrisburg, to constantly ignore the printers. Why printing is not treated as any other legitimate business we cannot tell? If all printers felt in regard to this matter as we do, we feel confident there would be more respect paid to our interests. There is aftern not one in ten, who now occupy seats in the House was the consideration of the Usur the Legislature, who could retain them without the aid of these same printers whose interests they are constantly disposed to neglect or trample under foot. We know it is alleged that a few frauds in our profession have over-charged the Commonwealth, but they do not amount to a dozen, and no one knows them better than the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and why not authorize him to pay the honest why not authorize him to pay the honest

The investigation which has been instituted by the Legislature regarding alleged improper conduct, on the part of Rev. (?) A. L. Guss, proprietor of the soldiers' orphan school of Cassville, Huntingdon county, this State, is bringing to light facts which make the very cheek of morality tingle with shame and every honorable heart to swell with indignation. Long ago Durborrow, of the Huntingdon Journal, denounced this man as a flithy brute in terms so plain and vigorous that the earnest attention of State Superintendent Wickershamshould at once have been engaged in the matter. But this gentleman saw fit to daily until the meeting of the Legislature, and then put upon this body a work which should have aroused his immediate and best efforts. The Grand Army of the Republic has also taken a lively interest in the matter and this fierd, who is shown to have at least attempted to make his school a house of prostitution, will probably have meted out to him the best punishment the law will allow. Some new punishment should be invented for one who will so betray a sacred trust, and who has thrown such a shade of disgrace over the orphan school system, and the profession of a minister of the Lord and the editor of a new-paper.

Our friend of the Journal deserves the thanks of every patriotic citizen of the State and lovers of probity everywhere for his relentless pursuit of this hound who is about to have his last day.—Meadville Republican.

The Cassville Investigation.

[Special Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Commercial.]

The Joint Committee of the two Houses of the Legislature, to investigate the Cassrille scandal closed its labors here on last Tuesday night, and returned to Harrisburg. I have only time to give you a prief resume of the testimony.

On Monday evening Miss Handcuff was examined, and testified that Guss drew was between thirteen and fourteen years of age, pulled her upon his lap, pressed her to his bosom, and offered her other indignities. She complained of this to one of the female employees, and by her assistance a letter was sent to her mother, who promptly sent to the guardian of the child to Cemand her, but she was not yielded up. A short time afterwards, she was taken into a room before a Justice of the Peace, and frightened into snearing that her charges were not correct. Again, when she was approaching sixteen, he lured her to the woods, and when the coast unfortunate man. DISTRICT ATTORNEY'S OFFICE, ongress-A Free Banking Law-The Retr.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 23, 1874. A FREE BANKING LAW.

A free banking law.

After nearly two weeks discussion of the subject in the Senate it is now generally believed that Congress will pass a free banking law. There has been a very free expression of opinion elicited from merchants and other prominent business men throughout the country, who have been communicating with their representatives in Congress on the subject, and the feeling is almost unanimous in favor of the measure. With proper restrictions and checks there is no doubt of the necessity and the advantages of freedom in banking. All who wish may then invest their capital in banking, and everything like favoritism and monopoly will be removed. The debate on the question will be taken.

The Prof. J. P. Wickersham, Superintendent of Common and Soldiers' Orphan Schools, voluntarily appeared before the Investigating Committee, at Harrisburg, on last Wednesday night and endeavored to justify his course towards Guss. The less the Professor says about this matter the better for him. We are informed that he alleged, as an apology for not being present at the Investigation, that he did not have a proposed in order to make the constitution or make the constitution or make the constitution or make the constitution or frame of government which were afterwards in the amendments which were afterwards in the amendments which were afterwards in orper or make the constitution or make GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

THE PRESERVATION OF FOREST TREES.

Wednesday, the 25th, is set apart for the consideration of the Centennial Exposition bill in the Senate. It will be the subject of a protracted and sharp debate. There is much jealousy between the representatives of different States in reference to this question. But it will not be continued, and a very general support will ultimately be given to the bill.

that her charges were not correct. Again, when she was approaching sixteen, he lured her to the woods, and when the coast was clear, threw her to the ground and endeavored to accomplish his vile purpose. Twice, subsequently, he had made similar attempts. She also stated that one of the girls was enciente, and that she was obliged to wear the witness' clothes, who was a much larger-sized girl. The boys would twit this poor creature while reciting in class, and charge her with familiarities with Guss. She stated that there were constant reports of his familiarity with the girls.

Gov. Moses, of South Carolina, is a most unfortunate man. Owing to some curious defect in his mental construction, whenever he sits down to write he is full as likely to use the exact language of some one cles as he is to invent one of his own. He sent a message to the Legislature recently, and a striking passage from Macauley slipped into it in the most unaccountable way. The other day he put the unregenerate among his constituents to shame by delivering an eloquent lecture on "Religion," but its beneficial effect has been a good deal weakened by the discovery that it was an al-
