The "bummers" of the "bummers" of the town, who have found the Prostitutor a very agreeable companion, decided upon a serenade, the main purpose, it is said, being the hope that Guss would be flattered into providing free whiskey to soak their dry skins. On a promise to pay for the music, the band was secured, and brought round at half past nine to the Professor's dwelling. While the band played the Professor threw open in thourch, while the minister is preaching.
