

The Huntingdon Journal.

VOL. 49.

HUNTINGDON, PA., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1874.

NO. 25.

The Huntingdon Journal

J. R. DURBORROW, J. A. NASH,
PUBLISHERS AND PROPRIETORS.

Office in new Journal Building, Fifth St.

The HUNTINGDON JOURNAL is published weekly, by J. R. DURBORROW and J. A. NASH, under the firm name of J. R. DURBORROW & CO., at $2.00 per annum, IN ADVANCE, $2.50 if not paid for in six months from date of subscription, and $3 if not paid within the year.

No paper, however, will be sent out of the State unless absolutely paid for in advance.

Transient advertisements will be inserted at TWENTY AND A HALF CENTS per line for the first insertion, SEVEN AND A HALF CENTS for the second, and FIVE CENTS per line for all subsequent insertions.

Regular quarterly and yearly business advertisements will be inserted at the following rates:

1 inch	2 inch	3 inch	4 inch	5 inch	6 inch	7 inch	8 inch	9 inch	10 inch
1 cent	2 cent	3 cent	4 cent	5 cent	6 cent	7 cent	8 cent	9 cent	10 cent

Local notices will be inserted at FIFTEEN CENTS per line for each and every insertion.

All Resolutions of Associations, Commissions of limited or individual interest, all party announcements, and notices of Marriages and Deaths, exceeding five lines, will be charged TWO CENTS per line.

Legal and other notices will be charged to the party having them inserted.

Advertising Agents must find their commission outside of these figures.

All advertising accounts are due and collectible when the advertisement is once inserted.

JOB PRINTING of every kind, in Plain and Fancy Colors, done with neatness and dispatch—hand-bills, Blanks, Cards, Pamphlets, &c., of every variety and style, printed at the shortest notice, and every thing in the printing line will be executed in the most artistic manner and at the lowest rates.

Professional Cards.

A. P. W. JOHNSTON, Surveyor and Civil Engineer, Huntingdon, Pa. Office: No. 113 Third Street, aug21,1872.

BROWN & BAILEY, Attorneys-at-Law, Office 24 door east of First National Bank. Prompt personal attention will be given to all legal business entrusted to their care, and to the collection and remittance of claims. Jan.7,71.

D. R. H. W. BUCHANAN, DENTIST, No. 225 Hill Street, HUNTINGDON, PA. July 3, '72.

CALDWELL, Attorney-at-Law, No. 111, 3d Street. Office formerly occupied by Messrs. Woods & Williams. [ap12,71.]

D. A. B. BRUMBAUGH, offers his professional services to the community. Office, No. 323 Washington Street, corner east of the Catholic Parsonage. [Jan.4,71.]

J. GREENE, Dentist. Office removed to Leister's new building, Hill Street. [Jan.4,71.]

L. ROBB, Dentist, office in S. T. Dr. W. A. Brown's new building, No. 539, Hill St., Huntingdon, Pa. [ap12,71.]

H. C. MADDEN, Attorney-at-Law, Office, No. 1, Hill Street, Huntingdon, Pa. [ap19,71.]

J. FRANKLIN SCHOCK, Attorney-at-Law, Huntingdon, Pa. Prompt attention given to all legal business. Office 229 Hill Street, corner of Court House Square. [Dec.4,72.]

J. SYLVANUS BLAIR, Attorney-at-Law, Huntingdon, Pa. Office, Hill Street, three doors west of Smith. [Jan.4,71.]

J. CHALMERS JACKSON, Attorney-at-Law, Office with Wm. Dorris, Esq., No. 403, Hill Street, Huntingdon, Pa. All legal business promptly attended to. [Jan.15.]

J. R. DURBORROW, Attorney-at-Law, Huntingdon, Pa., will practice in the several Courts of Huntingdon county. Particular attention given to the settlement of estates of decedents. Office in the Journal Building. [Feb.1,71.]

J. W. MATTERN, Attorney-at-Law and General Claim Agent, Huntingdon, Pa. Soldiers' claims against the Government for pay, bounty, widow's and invalid pensions attended to with great care and promptness. Office, No. 219, Hill Street. [Jan.4,71.]

S. GEISSINGER, Attorney-at-Law, Huntingdon, Pa. Office corner East of R. M. Speer's office. [Feb.5-1y.]

K. ALLEN LOVELL, J. HALL MUSSER, LOVELL & MUSSER, Attorneys-at-Law, Huntingdon, Pa. Special attention given to COLLECTIONS of all kinds; to the settlement of ESTATES, &c.; and to all other legal business prosecuted with fidelity and dispatch. [Nov.6,72.]

R. A. ORBISON, Attorney-at-Law, Office, 321 Hill Street, Huntingdon, Pa. [May3,71.]

WILLIAM A. FLEMING, Attorney-at-Law, Huntingdon, Pa. Special attention given to collections, and all other legal business attended to with care and promptness. Office, No. 219, Hill Street. [ap19,71.]

HOTELS.

JACKSON HOUSE, FOUR DOORS EAST OF THE UNION DEPOT, HUNTINGDON, PA. A. B. ZEIGLER, Prop. Nov.12, '72-6n.

MORRISON HOUSE, OPPOSITE PENNSYLVANIA R. R. DEPOT HUNTINGDON, PA. J. H. CLOVER, Prop. April 5, 1871-1y.

Miscellaneous.

H. ROBLEY, Merchant Tailor, in Leister's Building, opposite the Court House, respectfully solicits a share of public patronage from town and country. [Oct.16,72.]

R. A. BECK, Fashionable Barber and Hairdresser, Hill Street, opposite the Franklin House. All kinds of Tonic and Pomades kept on hand for sale. [ap19,71-6n.]

HOFFMAN & SKEESE, Manufacturers of all kinds of CHAIRS, and dealers in PARLOR and KITCHEN FURNITURE, corner of Fifth and Washington Streets, Huntingdon, Pa. All articles will be sold cheap. Particular and prompt attention given to repairing. A share of public patronage is respectfully solicited. [Jan.15,72y.]

W. M. WILLIAMS, MANUFACTURER OF MARBLE MANTLES, MONUMENTS, HEADSTONES, &c., HUNTINGDON, PA. PLASTER PARIS CORNICES, MOULDINGS, &c. ALSO SLATE MANTLES FURNISHED TO ORDER. Jan. 4, 71.

GO TO THE JOURNAL OFFICE for all kinds of printing.

FOR ALL KINDS OF PRINTING, GO TO THE JOURNAL OFFICE.

Printing.

TO ADVERTISERS:

THE HUNTINGDON JOURNAL, PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY MORNING.

BY J. R. DURBORROW & J. A. NASH.

Office in new Journal building Fifth St. HUNTINGDON, PA.

THE BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM IN CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA.

CIRCULATION 1700.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$2.00 per annum in advance. $2.50 within six months. $3.00 if not paid within the year.

ALL KINDS OF JOB WORK DONE WITH NEATNESS AND DISPATCH.

AND IN THE LATEST AND MOST IMPROVED STYLE.

SUCH AS POSTERS OF ANY SIZE, CIRCULARS, BUSINESS CARDS, WEDDING AND VISITING CARDS, BALL TICKETS, PROGRAMMES, CONCERT TICKETS, ORDER BOOKS, SEGAR LABELS, RECEIPTS, LEGAL BLANKS, PHOTOGRAPHER'S CARDS, BILL HEADS, LETTER HEADS, PAMPHLETS, PAPER BOOKS, ETC., ETC., ETC., ETC., ETC.

Our facilities for doing all kinds of Job Printing superior to any other establishment in the county. Orders by mail promptly filled. All letters should be addressed,

J. R. DURBORROW & CO.,

The Muses' Bower.

To "The Bard of the Glen."

BY J. W. WELCH.

I met, overpowered by a blushing monster, Rejoiced, enraptured by the children of men; When sweetest the voice of the dove in the morning, Arose the full notes of "The Bard of the Glen."

The strain "waked the breathings with my soul, Of hope's winning carol which first won my ear; And his golden beams thro' the distance of years, Lured from Lethe's gloom by "The Bard of the Glen."

Heed what my aid and heart by despair overpowered, Whilst energy, quickened, inspired me again; My mind caught the fever contained in the sunset Which rose on the breeze from "The Bard of the Glen."

Discarded by fate and a prey to dejection, Which paled his eyes, regarding my fate; "But for the deep tones of "The Bard of the Glen," Though e'er so assailed with a withering tempest, I'd dare the encounter again and again; Brought up by the words of a warm kindred spirit, This stress avowed, "The Bard of the Glen."

My happiness is by the daisy-clad threshold, And 'ere I smile upon thee, then warm-hearted friend; While life leads me not to lonely seclusion, I'll never forget thee, sweet "Bard of the Glen."

The Story-Teller.

A TERRIBLE NIGHT.

AN AUTHENTIC STORY.

I am growing old, my readers, and my hair, once so dark and glossy, is now thickly thinned with silver; my eyes once bright and sparkling are now somewhat dim; and my children and grand children tell me that my memory is failing fast.

It may be so, but although I cannot recall recent events that take place from day to day, I can remember, as well as if it happened yesterday, a night of terror that I once spent in the wilds of America.

It was in the year 1830 that we settled in our home in the lonely wilderness. Ours was the only clearing for a full mile on either side, and the road to my own brother's house was merely a blazed path through a thick pine forest.

My husband had the clearing of his father's on an Irish family, Burke by name, consisting of six brothers, and with the exception of the two youngest, a wild fierce looking set they were.

The eldest of these men, Ulick, was a remarkable looking man, with just the sort of face and expression one sees in pictures of Italian brigands. He was not the least like a laboring man in either manner or appearance. His features were strikingly handsome; his eyes, wild and black, gleamed with a most sinister expression; his mouth was hard and cruel. He was a dreadful tyrant, too, and his temper often broke out into such wild gusts of vindictive passion on the most trifling occasion, that scenes of great violence often took place in the shanty, which stood about thirty yards from our home.

Ulick often questioned Isabella, our only hired girl, as to whether we had much ready money in the house, and where the silver was kept that he saw hanging cleaned in the kitchen.

It was her opinion that he was a desperate character. I can little of the world's wickedness in those days, but I felt an instinctive dread of the bold stare he always gave me if I happened to meet him about the place. Once he sent a message for me to go and see him, as he was very ill.

His brother Mike brought over the message, and left directly as he had given it to me, so I had no time to say him I was wrong with Ulick. I made a little curd, which I thought might tempt a sick person to eat, and trying on my hat, was about to take it off, when Isabella stopped me.

"Wait till the master comes in, ma'am. He will take that over if you cannot spare me."

"But, Bella, Ulick is sick, and requested to see me."

"Never mind that, ma'am," she replied quietly. "Take my advice and do not go. I know the man better than you do, and I would almost swear that there is nothing the matter with him."

From that day my dread of Ulick Burke increased, and I eagerly looked forward to the time when the fallow should be cleared, and the shanty rid of its rough inmates.

It was in the month of February that business of an urgent nature obliged my husband to leave home for a town some forty miles distant. We had no man servant belonging to the house—not even a boy; so Isabella and myself were alone in our lonely dwelling.

My brother had not been over for some day, so I did not know of my husband's intended journey.

All day long, after he left, I felt a strange presentiment of coming evil, which as night drew on, rather increased than diminished.

Never before had the wind sounded so dreary as it did on that February night, as it moaned and sighed through the tall pine trees, or blew in fitful and angry gusts across the clearing.

I would have retired to bed in the hope of sleeping off my fears, but my baby was very restless, and I could not get him to sleep.

Taking the little man in my arms, I soon succeeded in amusing him and myself also, as in watching his playful wiles for a time forgot my fears; but just as I was rising to prepare for bed, I heard the tramping of oxen, and the loud shouting of the men who had that day gone to P— to bring up stores that day, whiskey and tobacco.

I knew at once, by the harsh words and hoarse notes that fell upon my ear, that the brothers had been drinking freely, and a feeling came into my mind that I would wait until all was quiet at the shanty before we ourselves retired for the night.

Baby had calmed down nicely, and was lying quietly upon my knee, when horror of horrors I happened to raise my eyes in the direction of the window, and saw a face pressed against one of the panes of glass, which, even in my wild terror, I recognized as belonging to Ulick Burke, regarding me with a look of fiendish hatred.

I knew enough not to scream, but rising up with a desperate effort, I dragged my trembling limbs into the kitchen.

Isabella had her back towards me, so she did not catch sight of my white and ghastly face, and before I had time to tell her anything, the kitchen door opened, and Ulick entered.

He closed the door carefully behind him, and stepping up directly in front of me, he fixed his gleaming eyes upon my face, with an expression which sent a shiver of blood curdling to my heart.

I clasped my helpless infant tightly in

The Muses' Bower.

To "The Bard of the Glen."

BY J. W. WELCH.

I met, overpowered by a blushing monster, Rejoiced, enraptured by the children of men; When sweetest the voice of the dove in the morning, Arose the full notes of "The Bard of the Glen."

The strain "waked the breathings with my soul, Of hope's winning carol which first won my ear; And his golden beams thro' the distance of years, Lured from Lethe's gloom by "The Bard of the Glen."

Heed what my aid and heart by despair overpowered, Whilst energy, quickened, inspired me again; My mind caught the fever contained in the sunset Which rose on the breeze from "The Bard of the Glen."

Discarded by fate and a prey to dejection, Which paled his eyes, regarding my fate; "But for the deep tones of "The Bard of the Glen," Though e'er so assailed with a withering tempest, I'd dare the encounter again and again; Brought up by the words of a warm kindred spirit, This stress avowed, "The Bard of the Glen."

My happiness is by the daisy-clad threshold, And 'ere I smile upon thee, then warm-hearted friend; While life leads me not to lonely seclusion, I'll never forget thee, sweet "Bard of the Glen."

The Story-Teller.

A TERRIBLE NIGHT.

AN AUTHENTIC STORY.

I am growing old, my readers, and my hair, once so dark and glossy, is now thickly thinned with silver; my eyes once bright and sparkling are now somewhat dim; and my children and grand children tell me that my memory is failing fast.

It may be so, but although I cannot recall recent events that take place from day to day, I can remember, as well as if it happened yesterday, a night of terror that I once spent in the wilds of America.

It was in the year 1830 that we settled in our home in the lonely wilderness. Ours was the only clearing for a full mile on either side, and the road to my own brother's house was merely a blazed path through a thick pine forest.

My husband had the clearing of his father's on an Irish family, Burke by name, consisting of six brothers, and with the exception of the two youngest, a wild fierce looking set they were.

The eldest of these men, Ulick, was a remarkable looking man, with just the sort of face and expression one sees in pictures of Italian brigands. He was not the least like a laboring man in either manner or appearance. His features were strikingly handsome; his eyes, wild and black, gleamed with a most sinister expression; his mouth was hard and cruel. He was a dreadful tyrant, too, and his temper often broke out into such wild gusts of vindictive passion on the most trifling occasion, that scenes of great violence often took place in the shanty, which stood about thirty yards from our home.

Ulick often questioned Isabella, our only hired girl, as to whether we had much ready money in the house, and where the silver was kept that he saw hanging cleaned in the kitchen.

It was her opinion that he was a desperate character. I can little of the world's wickedness in those days, but I felt an instinctive dread of the bold stare he always gave me if I happened to meet him about the place. Once he sent a message for me to go and see him, as he was very ill.

His brother Mike brought over the message, and left directly as he had given it to me, so I had no time to say him I was wrong with Ulick. I made a little curd, which I thought might tempt a sick person to eat, and trying on my hat, was about to take it off, when Isabella stopped me.

"Wait till the master comes in, ma'am. He will take that over if you cannot spare me."

"But, Bella, Ulick is sick, and requested to see me."

"Never mind that, ma'am," she replied quietly. "Take my advice and do not go. I know the man better than you do, and I would almost swear that there is nothing the matter with him."

From that day my dread of Ulick Burke increased, and I eagerly looked forward to the time when the fallow should be cleared, and the shanty rid of its rough inmates.

It was in the month of February that business of an urgent nature obliged my husband to leave home for a town some forty miles distant. We had no man servant belonging to the house—not even a boy; so Isabella and myself were alone in our lonely dwelling.

My brother had not been over for some day, so I did not know of my husband's intended journey.

All day long, after he left, I felt a strange presentiment of coming evil, which as night drew on, rather increased than diminished.

Never before had the wind sounded so dreary as it did on that February night, as it moaned and sighed through the tall pine trees, or blew in fitful and angry gusts across the clearing.

I would have retired to bed in the hope of sleeping off my fears, but my baby was very restless, and I could not get him to sleep.

Taking the little man in my arms, I soon succeeded in amusing him and myself also, as in watching his playful wiles for a time forgot my fears; but just as I was rising to prepare for bed, I heard the tramping of oxen, and the loud shouting of the men who had that day gone to P— to bring up stores that day, whiskey and tobacco.

I knew at once, by the harsh words and hoarse notes that fell upon my ear, that the brothers had been drinking freely, and a feeling came into my mind that I would wait until all was quiet at the shanty before we ourselves retired for the night.

Baby had calmed down nicely, and was lying quietly upon my knee, when horror of horrors I happened to raise my eyes in the direction of the window, and saw a face pressed against one of the panes of glass, which, even in my wild terror, I recognized as belonging to Ulick Burke, regarding me with a look of fiendish hatred.

I knew enough not to scream, but rising up with a desperate effort, I dragged my trembling limbs into the kitchen.

Isabella had her back towards me, so she did not catch sight of my white and ghastly face, and before I had time to tell her anything, the kitchen door opened, and Ulick entered.

He closed the door carefully behind him, and stepping up directly in front of me, he fixed his gleaming eyes upon my face, with an expression which sent a shiver of blood curdling to my heart.

I clasped my helpless infant tightly in

The Muses' Bower.

To "The Bard of the Glen."

BY J. W. WELCH.

I met, overpowered by a blushing monster, Rejoiced, enraptured by the children of men; When sweetest the voice of the dove in the morning, Arose the full notes of "The Bard of the Glen."

The strain "waked the breathings with my soul, Of hope's winning carol which first won my ear; And his golden beams thro' the distance of years, Lured from Lethe's gloom by "The Bard of the Glen."

Heed what my aid and heart by despair overpowered, Whilst energy, quickened, inspired me again; My mind caught the fever contained in the sunset Which rose on the breeze from "The Bard of the Glen."

Discarded by fate and a prey to dejection, Which paled his eyes, regarding my fate; "But for the deep tones of "The Bard of the Glen," Though e'er so assailed with a withering tempest, I'd dare the encounter again and again; Brought up by the words of a warm kindred spirit, This stress avowed, "The Bard of the Glen."

My happiness is by the daisy-clad threshold, And 'ere I smile upon thee, then warm-hearted friend; While life leads me not to lonely seclusion, I'll never forget thee, sweet "Bard of the Glen."

The Story-Teller.

A TERRIBLE NIGHT.

AN AUTHENTIC STORY.

I am growing old, my readers, and my hair, once so dark and glossy, is now thickly thinned with silver; my eyes once bright and sparkling are now somewhat dim; and my children and grand children tell me that my memory is failing fast.

It may be so, but although I cannot recall recent events that take place from day to day, I can remember, as well as if it happened yesterday, a night of terror that I once spent in the wilds of America.

It was in the year 1830 that we settled in our home in the lonely wilderness. Ours was the only clearing for a full mile on either side, and the road to my own brother's house was merely a blazed path through a thick pine forest.

My husband had the clearing of his father's on an Irish family, Burke by name, consisting of six brothers, and with the exception of the two youngest, a wild fierce looking set they were.

The eldest of these men, Ulick, was a remarkable looking man, with just the sort of face and expression one sees in pictures of Italian brigands. He was not the least like a laboring man in either manner or appearance. His features were strikingly handsome; his eyes, wild and black, gleamed with a most sinister expression; his mouth was hard and cruel. He was a dreadful tyrant, too, and his temper often broke out into such wild gusts of vindictive passion on the most trifling occasion, that scenes of great violence often took place in the shanty, which stood about thirty yards from our home.

Ulick often questioned Isabella, our only hired girl, as to whether we had much ready money in the house, and where the silver was kept that he saw hanging cleaned in the kitchen.

It was her opinion that he was a desperate character. I can little of the world's wickedness in those days, but I felt an instinctive dread of the bold stare he always gave me if I happened to meet him about the place. Once he sent a message for me to go and see him, as he was very ill.

His brother Mike brought over the message, and left directly as he had given it to me, so I had no time to say him I was wrong with Ulick. I made a little curd, which I thought might tempt a sick person to eat, and trying on my hat, was about to take it off, when Isabella stopped me.

"Wait till the master comes in, ma'am. He will take that over if you cannot spare me."

"But, Bella, Ulick is sick, and requested to see me."

"Never mind that, ma'am," she replied quietly. "Take my advice and do not go. I know the man better than you do, and I would almost swear that there is nothing the matter with him."

From that day my dread of Ulick Burke increased, and I eagerly looked forward to the time when the fallow should be cleared, and the shanty rid of its rough inmates.

It was in the month of February that business of an urgent nature obliged my husband to leave home for a town some forty miles distant. We had no man servant belonging to the house—not even a boy; so Isabella and myself were alone in our lonely dwelling.

My brother had not been over for some day, so I did not know of my husband's intended journey.

All day long, after he left, I felt a strange presentiment of coming evil, which as night drew on, rather increased than diminished.

Never before had the wind sounded so dreary as it did on that February night, as it moaned and sighed through the tall pine trees, or blew in fitful and angry gusts across the clearing.

I would have retired to bed in the hope of sleeping off my fears, but my baby was very restless, and I could not get him to sleep.

Taking the little man in my arms, I soon succeeded in amusing him and myself also, as in watching his playful wiles for a time forgot my fears; but just as I was rising to prepare for bed, I heard the tramping of oxen, and the loud shouting of the men who had that day gone to P— to bring up stores that day, whiskey and tobacco.

I knew at once, by the harsh words and hoarse notes that fell upon my ear, that the brothers had been drinking freely, and a feeling came into my mind that I would wait until all was quiet at the shanty before we ourselves retired for the night.

Baby had calmed down nicely, and was lying quietly upon my knee, when horror of horrors I happened to raise my eyes in the direction of the window, and saw a face pressed against one of the panes of glass, which, even in my wild terror, I recognized as belonging to Ulick Burke, regarding me with a look of fiendish hatred.

I knew enough not to scream, but rising up with a desperate effort, I dragged my trembling limbs into the kitchen.

Isabella had her back towards me, so she did not catch sight of my white and ghastly face, and before I had time to tell her anything, the kitchen door opened, and Ulick entered.

He closed the door carefully behind him, and stepping up directly in front of me, he fixed his gleaming eyes upon my face, with an expression which sent a shiver of blood curdling to my heart.

I clasped my helpless infant tightly in

The Muses' Bower.

To "The Bard of the Glen."

BY J. W. WELCH.

I met, overpowered by a blushing monster, Rejoiced, enraptured by the children of men; When sweetest the voice of the dove in the morning, Arose the full notes of "The Bard of the Glen."

The strain "waked the breathings with my soul, Of hope's winning carol which first won my ear; And his golden beams thro' the distance of years, Lured from Lethe's gloom by "The Bard of the Glen."

Heed what my aid and heart by despair overpowered, Whilst energy, quickened, inspired me again; My mind caught the fever contained in the sunset Which rose on the breeze from "The Bard of the Glen."

Discarded by fate and a prey to dejection, Which paled his eyes, regarding my fate; "But for the deep tones of "The Bard of the Glen," Though e'er so assailed with a withering tempest, I'd dare the encounter again and again; Brought up by the words of a warm kindred spirit, This stress avowed, "The Bard of the Glen."

My happiness is by the daisy-clad threshold, And 'ere I smile upon thee, then warm-hearted friend; While life leads me not to lonely seclusion, I'll never forget thee, sweet "Bard of the Glen."

The Story-Teller.

A TERRIBLE NIGHT.

AN AUTHENTIC STORY.