

Future Prospects of Wheat Culture.

It has become a settled fact that in the future the wheat product of Great Britain will steadily decrease. The importations into that country the present shipping season will not be far from 100,000,000 bushels. It is the demand for this vast quantity of grain that has kept up the price in our own markets to a profitable point; and it is the future demand that will govern the price of our wheat in the future. If that demand shall keep even with the surplus which we have to spare the price will be satisfactory; but if our production shall over-run the necessities of our customers, the price will be so low that it will not pay for producing it. The fact, therefore, that large tracts of land in Great Britain and Ireland have been withdrawn from wheat culture and have been turned into grazing fields and the production of meat, and that American fields are now looked to for the supply of grain, should not tempt us to go out of our way to largely increase our wheat production. On the contrary, our plan is to follow their example, to keep our wheat production stationary, and to increase our stock of beef cattle, sheep, and hogs as much as possible, so as to supply ourselves and leave only a moderate excess for shipment. If Europe needs 100,000,000 bushels and we have but 90,000,000 and that we need at home, in fact the price of the whole crop, will advance up to the extreme point that our customers can pay. But if we have but a small quantity over their needs the price of our whole production will depend upon what they are willing to pay. It would not then be wise to increase our growth of wheat, but rather to turn our attention to growing grass, and our meat and dairy products.—American Agriculturist.

Lemonade.

When people feel the need of an acid, if they would take vinegar alone, or use lemons or apples, they would feel as well satisfied and receive no injury. A suggestion may not come amiss as to a good plan, when lemons are cheap in the market, to make good lemon syrup. Press your hand on the lemon, and roll it back and forth briskly on the table to make it secrete more easily; then press the juice into a bowl or tumbler—never into a tin; strain out all the seeds, as they give a bad taste. Remove all the pulp from the peels, and boil in water—a pint for a dozen pulps—to extract the acid. A few minutes boiling is enough; then strain the water with the juice of the lemons, put a pound of white sugar to a pint of the juice, boil ten minutes, bottle it and your lemonade is ready. Put a tablespoonful or two of this lemon syrup in a glass of water, and you have a cooling, healthful drink.

No other Bitters in the universe can equal them. I lack space for detailing the availability of these Bitters, but will briefly state its general effects upon the human system, as follows: It absolutely Purifies the Blood. It speedily corrects all morbid changes in the Blood. It equalizes the circulation of the Blood. It regulates the supply and quality of the Blood. It prepares the blood to furnish a proper support to all the vital properties. It enriches the constituents of the Blood upon which the vital energy of the system is dependent. It infuses the proper degree of animal heat into the system. It purges from the system the morbid humors which retard its natural functions. It imparts vitality and elasticity to every organ of the Body. It corrects all derangements, however trivial, which are the first origin of Disease. It promotes the operation of the digestive organ. It improves the appetite and removes all disagreeable feeling after eating. It perfects digestion, rendering it natural and easy. It acts as a solid and efficient stomachic. It elevates the standard of all the vital forces. It strengthens the nervous fibres and diffuses a calm throughout the nervous system. It destroys all morbid conditions of the mind. It dispels dizziness and languor. It promotes buoyancy of spirit and feeling. It banishes those chagrin upon pleasure which produces gloom. It drives away those distressing symptoms which rob us of our happiness. It revives the physical energies by infusing new life and power into the system. It fortifies the system against the dangers of malaria, fevers and colds of the temperate, changes in the climate, &c. In short, it prepares the system for the radical change to be wrought in its condition, and restores it to perfect health and natural vigor.
