Republicans are gratified because those they have trusted have proved faithful and true, and our enemies for that reason are dumb. What is true of the Republican party in Pennsylvania is largely so of the party elsewhere. The National adminisparty in Pennsylvania is largely so of the party elsewhere. The National adminis-tration enjoys the confidence and approval of the country, and Congress, in its legis-lation, has met the expectation of a major-ity of the people. True, there were and are honest differ-ences of opinion in reference to great questions, most notably that of Finance;
