

Farm and Household.

Slicking up for Winter. BY ALEXANDER HYDE.

Farmers, in common with all householders generally are careful to slick up their premises in the spring, but are not so careful to do it in the fall.

Another chore for this season of the year is to look after the drains of the cellar and the land to see that the outlets are not choked up.

All the old boards and refuse lumber of all sorts about the premises should be carefully gathered before the snow falls, cut up and piled in the wood-house for the winter's fuel.

The wood-house itself should be cleaned out every Fall or Spring, for the accumulations of rotten chips are by no means conducive to health.

The cellar also needs attention after the roots are stored in it, it should be swept and the ceilings and sides whitewashed.

There is comfort and profit in slicking up.

How to Estimate the Profits of a Farm.

The farmer lives in his own house. The use of the house, which he does not pay for, is as much a part of his income as the money that a salaried man pays for rent.
