Governor's Message -- Concluded. and that the winters have grown more rigorous and the heat of the summer more intense in these same regions, and that their dwarfed fruits and stinted crops are plainly traceable to the absence of the usual moisture occasioned by denuding them of their trees. To test the correctness of these observations and determine whether it is advisable or practical to regulate to destruction of timber, I respectfully propose that the commissioners of the geological survey be empowered to employ a person to make the necessary scientific and practical inquiries. It is to be regretted that the act to modify the exemption law of 1849, so as to forbid a waiver of the exemption by the creditor, was not passed finally at the last session of the Assembly. It encountered no serious opposition, and failed to become a law from inattention. The ability of creditors to waive this exemption is frequently the parent of great injustice and misery, and the considerations of humanity that prompted the passage of the law in the interest of their innocent and helpless families, should secure its modification.

NAVIGATION OF THE OHIO RIVER. In May, 1872, a commission was ap pointed by the Governor of Pennsylvania to act in conjunction with commissions from the States of West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and Illinois, to determine what measures should be taken to secure the improvement of the navigation of the Ohio river. Several conferences were held and the event of their inquiry and experiments, was prepared by patient recovers his health. They are the great engineers of the United States army, is blood purifier and a life-giving principle, approved by the commissions for the im- perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system brief review of their labors and the suggestions they have to offer in regard to this enterprise. They recommend that the Legislature of Pennsylvania pass a joint resolution asking Congress to appropriate sufficient money to commence this improvement, and I heartily concur in this recommendation.

The Ohio is the nat-ural highway for the commerce of this wast region, and in seeking an outlet in are so prevalent in the valleys of our great river influence and support.

IN MEMORIAM. In the year that has just closed, the bar and people of Pennsylvania have had occasion to lament the death of two of her the law, was suddenly stricken down with breathe. The life of Judge Thompson digestive organs. was one of constant service to the State. In the Legislature and Congress, as President Judge of a judicial district, and upon the Supreme Bench, he displayed strong characteristics and remarkable abilitie that would have given him prominence in any community. Conspicuously known for his common sense, sterling integrity, knowledge of human nature, and general and intimate acquaintance with the principles and practice of the law, he was of a type of men rarely found in public employment, and for whom a whole people ourn when the State is deprived of their integrity and talents.

The recent demise of John M. It is a common observation, that nothing so soon reveals the character of a man as to invest him with power and authority. Judges Thompson and Read occupied po sitions of power and authority from early youth to a ripe old age, and died without a stain upon their character. What nobler epitaph could embalm their memory?
