Whose verdure embraces the morning's soft breeze, The attention now claims of my unskillful pen— The stylish abode of our former poor friend. I shall not attempt to describe in detail, The exquisite grandeur (I surely should fail) That beams from its portal, exceeding the glare Of princely magnificence costly and rare.

An Irish Serial Loem.

MISS BIDDY McCANN ;

-OR,-

THE WONDERFUL HAND,

BY DENNIS O'RAFFERTY.

PART THIRD.

HER MAGNIFICENCE. * * * * HER SAD DEATE.

An elegant mansion, surrounded by trees,

On cushions of scarlet, mid trappings of gold, Miss Biddy, the transported convict, behold : To eminence risen by means of the Hand, Which poured golden streams at the owners cu

But glory is short-lived when falsely attained, Though hope by misfortune or ju-tice bechained; The bliss she had bought at the cost of her soul, But hastened her flight to oblivion's goal.

Thus far she'd rejected all lovers that came Untouched by the influence of love's gentle flau:a; Dute, noble, and courtier, alike were despised, She deemed them all ingrates in robes of disguise.

But hard is the heart that will not quickly yield, When cupid with quiver and bow takes the field; She hired a coachman, one Timothy Byrne, Who did the proud head of the fair lady turn. $22 39

The beauty of Tim I shall not stop to paint: He hadn't enough to cause "Hebe" to faint; In fact beauty isn't the theme of my rhyme. I'll sing of its power at some c'her time.

And wound up the business as soon as he could.

And many young ladies have had cause to rue. That ever they heard the vile flatterers tones, And ended their days amid tears, prayers, and

Our heroire soon, with the bulk of mankind, Discovered that love in his passion is blind; Her husband had faults which before he concealed,

Refusing one jot in her favor to yield. But that which upturned their connubial bliss, And proved a hard bone of contention was this: The husband indulged rather freely in wine, In fact ha was drunk seven-eighths of the time.

'Tis said that prosperity turns the weak brain Of some who have long in adversity lain ; 'Twas surely the case with too fortunate Tim, The glare of his wealth endsed his senses to dim.

To quench his great thirst, and his gaming bills pay, Required vast sums to be furnished each day; Though millions untold were still at her command, She dreaded the King of "THE WONDERFUL HAND." Thus far her intentions, most firmly, had been

To hasten to rid her dark soul of its sin, To fill her deep coffers, then sell out her claim, And escape by this shrewd little Irish scheme.

For though the influx was prodigious, she knew The sums in her treasury quite slowly grew; So great was the drain, all the wierd fairy clan Were detailed as slaves of 'THE WONDERFUL HARP.' $19 62

Were detailed as investor in a worderful hand; Datware of the price that ere long must be paid. And also the schemes by his better-half laid. Like him in the fable he longed to behold The suppose of the section was to adapt the system to the new mode of voting. It meeturing one night from a social soirce, And caused him to suffer 'neath cupid's feil dart. Returning one night from a social soirce, Returning one night from a soci As to cumulative voting in corporative elections, they say in proposing to strike out the section authorizing it: "This section is very obscure and diffi Where he and his comrades were having a spree He swore he would capture that illegant hand. And live at his case on the fat of the land. "This section authorizing it: "This section is very obscure and difficult to interpret. In ordinary corporation relections each stockholder easts a certain number of votes, governed by the number of shares he holds. No matter how many directors are to be elected, his right is to vote for every one. But by this section he can cast the whole number of his votes for but one director, and if there be more than one, he must distribute his votes for but one director, and if there be more than one, he must distribute his votes for but one director, and if there be more than one, he must distribute his votes for but one director, and if there be more than one, he must distribute his votes for but one director, and if there be more than one, he must distribute his votes in the present instrument giving to the courts as well as to the Legislature there power to determine contexted legislature the power to determine contexted legislature thouse as the sole judge of the election and quilifications, while also constituting each House as the sole judge of the election and quilification of its members, the Commis-tion of its members 2 10 2 10 10 So carefully up the great staircase he stole, 10 Determined no longer his wish to control;
 $25 64 Secured the great p ize, and then hastoning away,
 $121 66 Was far from the spot ere the coming of day. Bereft of her treasure the fady declined, And finally lost the right use of her mind; Grew worse by degrees, till a maniae's knife Dissevered the cord of her sorrowfal life. But fearful, 'tis said, was the scene at her death, For scare ly had vanished her last heavy breath Ere a form indiscrible entered the door, And never was heard such a deafening roar, And had not the clergyman just then appeared, And soon by his opportune prayers interfered, The fiend of the pit would have borne her away, To fulfill the contract at Botany Bay. They buried her deep by the shore of the sea, Where roll the wild billows so sportive and free, But no sculptured monument boastingly stands, To honor the maid of "The WOXDERFUL HAND." <text><text><text> And now let us follow the frolicsome Tim, To see what adventures are falling to him; Possessed of the HAND he dreamed not of regre Or thought that his golden sun ever should set.

Suffice it to say that young Tim won the prize Without hypocritical form or disguise; He told her his love like an Irishman would,

That man's heart is false, in some cases, is true.
