REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

Call of the State Committee.

The Republicans of the State of Pennsylvania are hereby requested to assemble by their delegates in State Convention at noon on Wednesday, the 26th day of May, 1875, in the Fulton Opera House, at the city of Lancaster, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Governor and State Treasurer. Each Representative and Senatorial District will be entitled to the same representation as it has under the present apportionment for Senators and Representatives in the Legislature.

Russell BERRY, Chairman. A. Wilson NORRIS, Secretary.

His Excellency, Governor John F. Hartranft, will please accept our thanks for an early copy of the General Laws passed at the session of 1875.

Treasurer Mackey puts himself upon his dignity, and refuses to be investigated. Does this imply that there is something rotten? The party cannot endorse this kind of conduct.

Dad Lewis has got enough of the Guss party and pulled out. Dad is too shrewd a politician to tie up to a thing like that. Henry Wilson takes Dad's place as Chairman of the County Committee. Henry will, no doubt, suit Guss.

The Johnstown Tribune says positively that Hon. Butler B. Strang is a candidate for State Treasurer. The Philadelphia Times corrects itself and admits this to be the case, while the Sunday City News declares, just as positively, that he is not. When such authorities disagree who shall decide?

Judge Clarkson got off handsomely in the last Globe. Only a column and a quarter! Now, wasn't that nice? Everybody expected six columns, and a majority of it in small type, but the editor's "gray goose quill" must have given out and his readers were saved the usual infliction.

We are very much gratified at the prospects of the Centennial. It looks now as if the American Centennial year would be the greatest affair of the kind in the history of the world by a thousand fold. The whole civilized and Pagan world is likely to join with us. Is it not a grand thought? And, then, Philadelphia is to contain it all! Ah, she ought to become the grandest as well as the proudest city on the globe. All hail Philadelphia!

We have published several communications, and publish others to-day, favoring the election of Mr. Baker to the Superintendent. We publish these communications at special rates and we want it distinctly understood that we do not wish to be held responsible for them nor do we wish any one to infer our sentiments upon the subjects from these articles. When we have any opinions to express we will do so in our own way and not through the medium of others.

Col. John C. Everhart, of Blair county, is being brought forward as a Democratic candidate for State Treasurer. There is no purer and fairer Democrat in the State than Col. Everhart. Should he be nominated, and the Democrats prove successful, (of which there is very little prospect, however,) he would administer the affairs of that important office in a manner, we believe, that would be satisfactory to all parties concerned. But Col. Everhart is not the style of man for the men who manipulate Democratic nominations.

The campaign, this fall, in this county, in any contingency promises to be a very exciting one. In addition to the Governor and Treasurer on the State ticket, which will bring out a large vote there will be most of the important offices to be filled: Associate Judge, District Attorney, County Treasurer, Prothonotary, Register and Recorder, three County Commissioners, a Director of the poor, and three County Auditors. Those who wish to be elected had better be making their peace with the printers.

With Hartranft at the head of the ticket we will be able to knock down any pin the Democracy can put up, and will give them a margin of 20,000. But when in justice to the General and the party, we want no dead weights on the ticket. We want men who can "run on their own bottom," men who command respect and influence by their personal merits; men whom we know we can rely upon. With such candidates there can be no doubt of the political result in the old Keystone next fall. —Bedford Inquirer.

That is our "poish" exactly. We want a good running mate along side. One that will help to pull the loads. Anderson or Strang will fill the bill.

The Legislative Committee appointed to investigate the affairs of the Philadelphia and Reading Iron and Coal Company, in connection with those of the Reading Railroad, says the Pittsburgh Telegraph, met in Philadelphia on Tuesday, and organized for business with Senator Mackay as Chairman. It is generally known that the stockholders of the Reading Railroad Company are the owners of the franchises of the Iron and Coal Company, and by virtue of this ownership, it is alleged, they get around constitutional and railway prohibitions to oppress the public. The attorney for the association of retail coal dealers, which is pressing the investigation, desired the Committee to understand that the complaint of the retail dealers was not based upon the fact that the Reading Company was selling coal at retail, and underselling the retail coal dealers, but on the fact that the Company had entered into a combination to regulate the price and transportation of coal in their own favor. The general impression seems to be that the "vested rights" of the monopoly will secure them a favorable verdict at the hands of the committee, and that the retailers and consumers of coal have no means of redress, the Legislature having given away their rights to the Iron and Coal Company.

SAPPY.

The Globe's "Efforts to Unite the Party" would really melt the heart of a stone or bring tears to the eyes of a potato. Years and years ago, when the old Hardshill Baptists were swinging around, it would have been worth a whole ten-acre lot of lava boulders to have heard one of them read an article like "Efforts to Unite the Party." How he would have blubbered and sobbed over it; get pathetic and then bawdy; snuffed and whined, until his final "ahs" would have been heard half a mile, and yet he would not have had half the hypocrite that the author of that article is. After doing everything in his power to break up the Republican party, for the last two years, he now comes whining back.

"The mildest mannered man that ever cut a throat or settled a ship."

Oh, no, Mr. Pickinif, the Republicans don't mean to surrender their organization to those who have labored assiduously for years to ruin it. They are willing to leave you take your position in the ranks, and participate in all the usages of the party, but The Globe nor its editor cannot be raised, at one spring, to the front, by a jug full. We can't surrender the efforts of half-a-dozen years for an uncertainty. So dry up your crocodile tears.—You left the party of your own accord, and affiliated with the Democrats. You have no right to expect us to reward you for your perfidy. You ought to have no objection to this if you believe your own statements. If a large majority are willing to surrender to you, you will be very foolish not to take the station you left a couple of years ago, and rise on the popular tide. You certainly ought to expect a dead sure thing ahead. Fall in, and close up the ranks. Your followers want peace. We all want peace.

Attorney General Williams has resigned. Hon. John Scott, Hon. B. F. Butler, Hon. Rockwood Hoar and Hon. Matt. Carpenter are named in connection with the vacancy.

Every School Director in the county should come to the election next Tuesday and vote for Baker.

The Vineland Shooting.

CONDITION OF CHAS. K. LANDIS AND HIS PRISON TENDERS.

A letter from Vineland says: The reports that Carruth is slowly improving leads Mr. Landis to think that the wounded man will recover, and he expresses a hope that he may. There is no immediate prospect of any effort being made by the prisoner's counsel to secure a release on bail under the English common law, which prevails in this state. If Carruth should die within a year and a day after the shooting, Landis would be indicted and tried for murder. Should he recover or seem likely to recover beyond reasonable doubt, a motion would be made by Landis's lawyers for the production of the prisoner before the Supreme Court, and his release on bail for trial on charge of assault with intent to kill, for which the Grand Jury would then indict him in the meantime. Landis will not be indicted, and the Grand Jury will take no action until either one of the contingencies arises which I have stated. The general excitement hereabouts has largely subsided, the public opinion apparently preponderates in Landis's favor. The counsel for Mr. Landis are Benjamin H. Brewster, of Philadelphia; Messrs. Potter and Nixon, of Bridgeport, and Messrs. House and Turner, of Vineland. As will be seen from the above statement, the time of the trial is extremely indefinite.

CONDITION OF MR. CARRUTH.

Mr. Carruth's condition has grown worse to-day. He had been gradually improving recently, and strong hopes were beginning to be entertained, but to-night he is in a very precarious state. He has not made any ante mortem statement, how ever, and no arrangements for that purpose have been considered. Mr. Carruth does not care to talk of the shooting, and his physician, Dr. Tulley, will not allow any one to question him about it. He has, however, contradicted the statement of Landis as to any words passing between them before the shooting. He has no recollection of anything being said. He also denies that he was armed at the time, and positively asserts that he never has, at any time, carried weapons since he lived here. He expresses no animosity toward Landis, and is still hopeful of his own recovery.

I clip from the files of the Independent the following specimen of dignified journalism, as a specimen of one of the many paragraphs which are sent to our neighbors that Mr. Landis's pig-pen is not likely to smell to heaven the coming season. The swine have emigrated." This was published just after Mr. Landis sailed for Europe, and as there has been no reforms in the reformer's pig-pen, it was given a figurative rather than a literal interpretation by the general readers of Mr. Carruth's journal.

Mr. Beecher and the Donkey.

The donkey is a most intelligent brute, in fact, one of the most intelligent of beasts, he is yet used as a symbol of folly and stupidity in man. Moreover, the donkey has a fine sense of humor, which the human creature likened unto him usually has not. The contempt of the donkey for man and his arguments is really sublime. He has his own views, and is not open to conviction in opposition to them. It is true he may yield to a prolonged thumping of a big stick, but it is only under protest, and he is sure to cause his master a discomfort that a donkey ought to endure even in behalf of his opinions. Then he has a chance of making a contemptuous retort by kicking up his heels and tossing you over his head. Take him altogether, the donkey is a very wise brute, and funny, too. He is not fippant like the monkey nor rickshaking as the dog, but his sense of fun is deep, and he has a keen appreciation of satire. Like all really good jokers, he increases the effect of his fun by a solemn demeanor. We fear, however, that there is a touch of cynicism about the donkey; but it cannot be denied that almost everybody who is at all in earnest and has had much experience of men, gets a coating of that. This is a essay on the donkey is suggested of course by Mr. Beecher's remark to Brother Sherman, as to his having been not very bad, but very much of an ass in this adultery matter. He is reported to have further remarked to some one who gently rebuked him for consulting with his lawyers on Sunday, that it was said in the Bible that it was lawful for a man to get his ass out of the pit on the Sabbath. We do not believe, however, that any donkey could have been so stupid as Mr. Beecher wishes us to believe him. If people had tried such a little game as Mr. Beecher swears that Tilton, Moulton, and Mrs. Moulton played, a trick so cheap and low, and he an old and wary donkey, he would have choked his eye, given his ears a kicking, and kicked his heels, and then he would have shakin'. We contend that Mr. Beecher did the donkey gross in justice, and, to his own credit as a creature outside of an idiot asylum, greatly exaggerated his own capacity for stupidity. In fact, we think that Mr. Beecher by his remark slandered the donkey, and gave a silly explanation of his own extraordinary conduct. The ass theory never will serve the Plymouth pastor, he may be sure. Yet he did bewildering things—on the theory of his innocence, we mean. He never denied the charge of what he calls improper solicitations; never seemed to get angry about it; wrote to and received answers from Sherman. Then he was in so good a dread-dread state of mind about drawing off his affections from her husband, and said nothing to her on the subject; walked with her in the public streets; told her it was permitted to her to come to his house, and that his wife was away; and did very many other things just as inexplicable.

Taking assinity in the ordinary received sense, it will strike some people that the ass may be, not Mr. Beecher, but the man who swallows such a tale. Some people find it harder to do that than it would be to eat thistles as the actual donkey does.—New York Times, April, 23

The Centennial of the First Shot.

On the night of the eighteenth of April, 1775, just one hundred years ago, from the old bell tower of North Church tower, flashed a gleam of the signal light which told to Paul Revere that the British troops had marched forth from Boston, where they immediately started out to alarm the people and encourage them to arms. The history of that day is thus narrated: "Ten regiments of the flower of the British army had been sent to Boston early in 1775 to overawe the American Colonists, but every day three floated to the ears of the commander, that the sturdy yeoman gathered military stores and provisions as if preparing for the state of war. Concord was one of the store houses of the provincials. It was determined to destroy these supplies and arms at the same time teach a lesson that would not be forgotten. Very quietly the preparations to march were all made, but the designs became known and long before the British reached their destination, the alarm bells had called the people to arms. The invading force consisted of eight hundred or one thousand men under the command of Lieut. Col. Smith and Major John Pitcairn. At day break they reached the village of Lexington, where they found fifty or sixty armed men, and as many unarmed ones. The Americans made no show of resistance, but, exasperated at seeing them armed, Pitcairn ordered his men to fire, when the American were killed and wounded. The whole affair was a dastardly, cold blooded massacre. Concord was at last reached and the troops were dispersed on their various errands of destruction. But from every direction the gallant yeomen gathered and they gazed down on the British troops until they could stand it no longer. In the face of two abreast, the British were killed and wounded. The minute men, under the command of Major Buttrick, marched towards the bridge which led into Concord. When near the bridge, the British troops fired a volley and two Americans fell dead and one wounded. "Fire," shouted the American commander and there rang forth the volley whose sound the reformer postulates "was heard round the world." As the echoes rolled through the colonies the sturdy freemen remembered the prophetic words of Lord Oatham "that the first shot fired separates the two countries," and prepared themselves for the opening war. One hundred years have passed away.

"The foe long lies in silence slept, Alike the conqueror silent sleep; And time, the milder bridge has swept Down the dark stream which seaward creeps." —Daily Examiner of Monday.

The Bishop of Manchester, England, preaching at Urnston recently, remarked that he desired above all to see the Church of England recover her glorious title of being the poor man's church. He deplored the want of liberality which rendered it necessary in some cases to charge a few pence for the use of the church, and to maintain the Church as a national institution unless it rested distinctly upon a popular basis.

A $4.00 Book for $1.50.

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in plain English, or Medicine Simplified. By R. V. PRINCE, M. D., Counselor-in-Chief of the Board of Physicians and Surgeons of the World, Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y. The above work—a book of about nine hundred large pages, profusely illustrated with Wood Engravings and Colored Plates, and well and strongly bound—will be sent, post paid, to any address, for one Dollar Fifty Cents, making it the cheapest book ever offered to the American People. Other books treating of domestic medicine, of like size and style of binding, and not nearly so well illustrated, with no colored plates, and some of them lacking prescriptions and making known no means of self-care for the diseases which they discuss, sold from three dollars and up. We have five dollars. The above work is published by the author, printed and bound with his own machinery, and where it is sold through agents, as other like works are, the price of it would have to be too low for the publisher. For whom the price is so low, the author's fair price for his production, then adds a profit to his investment large enough to satisfy himself and compensate him, not only for his labor, but also for the risk of pecuniary loss which he assumes in taking the chance of the enterprise for his own sake, and when the State, County and assessing agent has each received his share, they have added to the expense of a book, that originally cost about $1.50, no more than the sum of $4.00 for it. The People's Medical Adviser, on the contrary, is placed within the pecuniary reach of all classes by the author, who adapts the plan of the Dispensary, dispensing with the middle man, and the benefit of his profits to the people, offering his book at a price little above actual cost of publication. That such a pricing little more than the cost of losing their money, and that they should be able to purchase it, is a fact that money addressed to him at Buffalo, N. Y., and enclosed in registered letters may be his risk of loss. The author's large correspondence with the people upon medical matters, which we are fully informed, frequently exceeds three hundred letters a day, and requires several trained and skillful medical assistants and abroad reporters to enable him to entertain and answer the questions of his readers, and to make the necessary arrangements for the publication of his works, and to send them to the various parts of the world, and hence it is found important to the author, that he should be enabled to sell his books at a price which would enable him to do so. All the most prevalent diseases of both sexes are also plainly and fully described and means of self-care made known. It contains other works on Domestic Medicine, including the subjects of Cholera, Cerebral Physiology, Hygiene, Temperance, Marriage, Reproduction, etc., all of which are treated in an original and interesting manner, and are a compendium of Anatomical, Physiological and Medical Science, and embodies the latest discoveries in each department.

Dyspepsia! Dyspepsia! Dyspepsia!

Dyspepsia is the most perplexing of all human ailments. Its symptoms are almost infinite in their variety, and the forms and dependent victims of the disease often fancy themselves the prey, in turn, of every known malady. This is due, in part, to the fact, that the disease lies between the stomach and the brain, and in part also to the fact that any disturbance of the digestive function necessarily deranges the liver, the source of the bile, and affects, to some extent, the quality of the blood.

K. F. Knapp's Bitter Wine of Iron is a rare cure. This is not a new preparation, but it has been in the practice of eminent physicians, with an unparalleled success; it is not expected or intended to cure all the diseases to which the human system is subject, but it is a most valuable remedy in its most obstinate form. Knapp's Bitter Wine of Iron never fails to cure. Symptoms of Dyspepsia are loss of appetite, wind and rising of the food, dryness
