Hard Times.

BY DENNIS O'RAFFERTY.

Though sinseless rhymes,

Though sinseless raymes,
In these hard times,
But vex the heart and head shure,
Ye'll all excuse,
Me Irish muse,
For she on grafe is fed shure.

For this same cause,

I'll wag my jaws,
And thus sustain me courage;

But now I sup thin porridge.

Och ! 'tis too bad,

Me heart is sad,
To think of joys departed;
But punch me eye,
If e'er I'll ery,
Although I'm broken hearted.

I'll sing me song,

And trudge along, And munch at me last praty;

I've fought thus far,

To serve me as a beacon

Not one small glare,
To show me where
The ship of State is lakin.

Upon the land.

But still I'll stand,

'Twas not because, Of unsound laws,

That poverty disgraced me.

Thin let us call,

From slumber's hall, Each dormant resolution; We yet shall wring,

The right of restitution

From darkness' king,

Where fortune's wave has placed me;

I'll fight hard times, And write bad rhymes, Till eighteen hundred and eighty.

LITERATURE.

Literature for Little Folks, by Elizabeth Llovd, is a little book consisting of appropriate selections in verse, from favorite nurser pieces, and standard authors; accompanie by pretty illustrations, and questions and ex-ercises for the slate, all designed to lead the young mind from one stage of development to another, and impart a knowledge of language and composition. The author justly takes the position that the committing of rules of Syntax to memory, in early youth is not as much advantage to the learner as it is usually considered to be; but that the art of speaking and writing correctly come from hearing others use the language correctly. The book can be recommended as useful either at home or at school. Price 50 and 75 cents. Published by Sower, Potts & Co., Philadelphia. The same house has just brought out How to Write Let ters, by J. Willis Westlake, Prof. of English Literature in the State Normal School, at Millersville, Pa., which has the merit of being systematic, scholarly and thorough, as well as practical. It is destined to be authority of the subject of letter writing, and is just the book that has long been needed in schools and societies. Every person who has a letter to write, (and who does not have in this work, and who does not have in this letter to write, (and who does not have in this write). country), should have one of these little books.

It says everything that can or need be said on the subject, and contains every information about letters, notes, addresses, etc., to all sorts of persons. Price $1.00 and $1.50. J. H. Holtzinger, Huntingdon, P., Agent for the books.

The finely illustrated "Sketches of India" are concluded in this number, the final paper dealing with the new era now opening for that magnificent country, whose most intelligent natives are rapidly assimilating the civilization of the West, and breaking down the barriers of caste and superstition. A long and earnest article on "The College Student," by Professor James Morgan Hart, will commend itself to the attention of all who are interested in the details of our collegiate system, and who desire its improvement; while another educational sub ject, of a more special character, "The Instruc-tion of Deaf Mutes" is briefly but suggestively > rich and varied in its contents, and the num-ber of engravings of which there are eighty-five. This is the oldest, and therefore the most experienced of our American Monthlies and well deserves the reputation it has achived. The number opens with Benjamin F. Lossing's first paper on the Romance of the Hudson, which deals with Revolutionary events, and also lighter legends and matters of literary interest. In view of the Centennial unaccountable concealment in the last Directors' Report of the Alms-House affairs, it may tertaining paper on "Old Philadelphia" will not be out of place to show how these mag" be read everywhere with the greatest interest. County Commissioners."

Now what says, and how reads the law in relation to County Commissioners? Act of Of General Custers' "War Memories;" in which he gives us his experience at West Point, and a very vivid picture it is of life at that honored military school. The breaking out of the late war produced an excitement there hardly equalled in the outside world. Amid great difficulties and some temporary disgrace, Custer graduated, and was dispatched at once to Washington, given a command in the Second Cavalry, then with General McDowell. Custer left, with but a few hours' delay, for the front, the bearer of dispatches from General Scott to General McDowell. After an all night ride, to General McDowell. After an an ingarther, be joined the army at 3 A. M., just as they were breaking camp to begin the battle of Bull Run, with just time for an early breakfast.

Atlantic has been progressing finely in the Centennial year. Its real merit has always been its sufficient recommendation, but now after having stood this best of tests for nearly nineteen years, it has added to its attractions an elegant premium portrait of Henry W. Longfellow, the recently elected Centennial Poet. The April number of Atlantic contains more than its usual quota of good poems, be-sides other well written contributions.

Then allow them three days each at Huntingdon, to settle with the County Auditors, and we have the grand total of $159 60, making for each Director $53 20 for twenty-one days necessarily spent in the discharge of their really necessary duties.

Now I submit to the intelligent and unbiased people of Huntingdon county whether these St. Nicholas is fresh and delightful as ever-Some April Magazine.
