The corps of Instructors is equal to that of any of our first class Colleges for Young Ladies; and is fully adequate to the work of Higher and Solid Education, as well as the more Establic departiment of Music and its correlatives in the Fine Arts.

We can assure parents that in this Institution, they will be certain to find everything which is not could nardly hind a man in a township who had cheek enough to put up a notice warning the public from thus trespassing on his premises. He felt ashamed to do it, and well he might. Some time ago your correspondent was traveling over the country on foot. He came to a certain point on the public road where, by walking over two fields, he could shorten his distance almost a mile—he determined to do this but just as he was -he determined to do this, but just as he was going to cross the fence he saw a notice on a tree that he supposed he had better read—it read thus: "All persons are hereby cautioned against walking through my fields, as any person thus offending will be punished to the full extent of the law," signed &c. There was no grain in those fields he was going to walk over, and indeed they were signed &c. There was no grain in those fields he was going to walk over, and indeed they were really too poor to grow grain. Ten acres of it would not have kept a pair of killdeers from starvation. Now I refer to this to show that men use this law, not because they are injured in any way, but merely for selfishness and a disposition to show their authority whenever they can do it.—As I have stated, men at first were ashamed to enforce this law or even put up a notice or caution on some out of the way place on their farm, but now they are not ashamed to have their cautions published in the county papers. We see notices something like the following published in the papers. "Caution.—We hereby notify all persons now and hereafter, not to hunt game, or gather any kind of nuts or berries off our lands, including our woods and mountain land. No trespassing or walking through our fields will be allowed, and any dogs found running on any of our lands, fwithout a master, will be shot. Any person or persons violating this notice will be punished to the full extent of the law." We have seen notices something like the above that perhaps would cost $1,00 for publication, signed by a half dozen or more of rich land owners in order to save money. These are the kind of men, in nine cases out of ten, who put up and publish cautions forbidding any one from trespassing on their premises. The men who own lands in almost every instance have an abundance of the moet substantial fruits, such as apples, pears, peaches and cherries. These fruits requires culture, and it requires money and means to procure them. And while men who sign and educational power of an undisturbed college and educational power of an undisturbed college.
