Vanderbilt's son Cornelius and his sisters are preparing to make a move on the old millionaire's will. They are not satisfied with the half million feach left them, but they want a slice of the hundred millions he left. I should be satisfied with what the least of them got. Cornelius, who is moving, was left an income of two thousand dollars a month, but it isn't enough for him. He wants one-tenth of the estate or nothing. There will be an ugly fight over it. I have made up my mind unalterably not to leave a hundred millions for my heirs to wrangle over. I don't like these fights of families over property.

is still as dull as it can be, with no prospect of improvement. The people are now waiting for spring, hoping that warm weather will bring the change.

Spring, noping that warm weather will oring the change.

Before you shall have read this letter, the bill to this creation of a National Returning Board will probably be a law of the land. As boys tose, will tose up a Supreme Court Judge and cry "Hayes" or "Filden." It is the boys' play transferred to the areas of politics. Cotton was king one; Chance is king to-day. I have too much faith in the republican Board faith in the republican diea, and in the American people, to despair of the Republic, which side so-ever may turn up when the game is played. We survived the red rule of the Slave Power; Pierce and Buchanan could not destroy us; the Fugitive San Buchanan could not destroy us; the Fugitive San affer such a diseaster. We live in an era of reaction—like-the eras that saw the Staarts brought back to Begland, and the House, the United States will still endare and grow young and strong again after such a diseaster. We live in an era of reaction—like-the eras that saw the Staarts brought back to Begland, and the Bourbons return to France. It is an "Bolipse of Faith." But the sun shines forth after ever clipse. Eras of comprimise come round like commercial panies in the history of aftracet; but, as "the world does move," in spite of Spatish Inquisitions, so, too, the people do rule in spite of American conservation.
