Meanwhile, he will not interrupt the present status of affairs in Louisiana and South Carolina.

Grant seems to be forgetting the old truth that "He that endureth to the end shall be saved." As they draw that amount in full for this winter's work they do not at all like the idea of coming here next winter to Monday next.

The Bellefonte Republican copies the greater portion of an article of ours on the defeat of the Stay Law and comments thus: "We are surprised that in a Christian community, as this State claims to be, that there are laws that, when put in force that there are laws that, when put in force by the avaricious creditor, will actually turn a man, his wife and little children, out of doors—will force them upon the hands of charity. This is barbarous, unchristian, heathenish, and Pennsylvania is the only State so far behind the times as to permit it."

The Bellefonte Republican copies the finguished service—he asserts that he will only maintain the existing condition of affairs in those states. It tooks, now, as if the were tired out, and sought to shirk responsibility, and let his administration fizzle out.
