It is well known, not only to the scientific but to all who have observed the ordinary permanent magnet, it becomes magnetized, and while in that position is itself a magnet by induction, having polarity and the power of attraction and repulsion, like other magnets, opposite poles attracting and like poles repelling each other. But Prof. Gary has discoverng each other. But Prof. Gary has discovered what is not generally known, that as the bar of iron is brought nearer the poles of the magnet, when very near, yet not quite in con-tact, its polarity changes, the positive pole eing changed, by means of a current changer, to correspond with the change of polarity in the bar, at the instant such change takes place attraction ceases and repulsion begins, and a grave. otion is obtained. Then by using two magnets, or sets of magnets, one to attract while the other repels, the bar of iron, which may be attached to a walking-beam, pendulum, or other lever, is moved to and fro with a rapidity and regularity suited to any mechanical use, and with a power limited only by the power of the magnets applied. It is as if the pile driver should discover a means whereby, at the instant his falling hammer reaches the earth, the power of gravitation could be reversed to send the ponderous weight back again to strike an upward blow, and then down again with the ame force as before, and so on perpetually.

grave and important one, one upon which the sal-vation or condemnation of many may depend.— We think the Bible will justify us in saying that it is not possible for any person to be a christian and either oppress or despise the poor. The rea-son God gives for saving the rightecus at the last day is that they had given add and confort to the a burlesque of this question, to me it is a very icle in presenting the case of a certain storekeeper who was imposed upon by a number of poor men whom he denounces as "rascals." Now, poor men whom he denounces as "raseals." Now, we do not justify this kind of dealing, and we believe, as he does, that when these men got into business again that they should have paid this creditor's bill, and we believe too, that it was wrong in him to trust out all his stock in this way, and if he failed he can only blame himself for it; according to his own argument if they lived up to all they made when they had employment how could he expect them to pay him for what they got when they were out of employment? We admit all in this picture that "Equite" elaims in it, and that it was all wrong, and we believe, too, that it was the strongest case he could present of poor men imposing upon a "merciless creditor." Now this was not so bad after all when it took all the poor men about a large factory, perhaps, to the poor men about a large factory, perhaps, to break down one man and it took them three years can do at this business when he fails to pay his bills: A well known banker in a neighboring county failed, a few years ago, and what was the effect? Hundreds of men were financially ruined, and it did not take three years to do it, but the very hour that the news went forth that Mr.—had failed the work was done. The failure of this one man carried sorrow into many a happy family and the entire county has, and will, feel the effects of this single failure for years to come. We have no hard charges to bring against this man for failing to meet his liabilities. we believe that it is possible for an honest man, during a panic like is possible for an honest man, during a panic like the one we have passed through, to become so in-volved that it is impossible for him to pay his just debts. But where was "Equite" when this failure occurred? He denounces all the poer men who failed to pay "Wilkins" his bill as secondrels and rascals. I say why had he no reproaches to cast upon this man whose failure affected an en-tire county? because he was a rich man; this was the reason.

Now as all the writers on the side of oppression have made a great hobby of honesty, we want to show the reader who it is that makes a business of training men to be dishonest. It is the rich! Any one familiar with the old plan of running coal furnaces knows that there was a regular school for training men to be dishonest. They would let their wood out by contract at so much per cord. Now, when the iron master and eler took up the wood, it did not matter how well o honestly the wood was ranked, they would dock that at the expiration of the four years, should them a certain amount on every cord, so in order to get his own, the wood-chopper was under the necessity of cheating the iron-master in return.— He would cut his wood a little shorter than con-tract, and use every deception in ranking it in order to meet this dockage, and if he would fail to get his own in this way, he would try and draw ahead of his wages and then leave in debt to go to another furnace to carry on the same game.— Now who was to blame with this? The Iron Master, we say, as the wood-chopper had to re sort to all this trickery in order to get his own and keep his family.

Again, rich men and companies generally give their work out by contract, through sealed proposals. In this way poor men, in order to secure the job, put in a bid lower than it is possible for them to do the work according to contract, so that they are almost compelled to slight the job, whatever it may be in order to meet the wants of a facility. ever it may be in order to meet the wants of a family. Necessity knows no law; poor men are often lead to do things of necessity, that they would not do if they were differently situated, hence the wise man's prayer: "Give me neither poverty nor riches, least I be full and deny thee or least I be poor and steal." I wish to notice one point more in "Equite's" article. "The class of ignorant politicians who usually get to Harrisburg to make and tinker at laws seem to think that unless they can claim to have done something for the "poor man" they cannot urge a special plea unless they can claim to have done something for the "poor man" they cannot urge a special plea for further political preferment." Now, from this quotation the reader will see that "Equite" is grossly ignorant of what our legislators have been doing at Harrisburg. We would ask "Equite" or any one in favor of oppressing the poor, what has been done for them? When was there an act or law passed in any way benefitting the poor? It certainly was not the stay law passed by our Leg-islature at its last session. I just have one thing to say of that law and of those who passed it:— They either did not understand it, or they offered it to the poor man as an insult, and to put him out of the notion of applying for a stay law again. I am however charitable enough to believe the former, that they did not understand it. hard to be poor." JUSTICE.
