Republican State Convention.

HEADQUARTER'S REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE, HARRISBURG, May 26th, 1877. In pursuance of a resolution of the Republican State Committee, adopted at a meeting held in Harrisburg, this day, a Republican State Convention, to be composed of delegates from each Senatorial and Representative district, to the number to which such district is entitled in the Legislature, is hereby called to meet in the city of Harrisburg, at 12 o'elock noon, on Wednesday, August 29th, 1877, for the purpose of nominating candidates for Supreme Judge, State Treasurer and Auditor General, to be voted for at the ensuing general election on the sixth day of November next. A WORD TO OUR PATRONS.

For the last two years our patrons have been repeatedly reminded, by parties in interest or their friends, that all advance payments made to the firm of J. R. Durborrow & Co., might result in loss to the party making payment, on the ground that seven-twelfths of the office belonged to J. Hall Musser, who might get control, at any time, and that absolute loss to the patron would be the result. The litigation, growing out of this claim, came to a climax on the 11th inst., in the Supreme Court. Mr. Musser was kicked out of Court with the costs upon his back. This settles the question of ownership for the future, and we appeal to our patrons to come forward and help us to pay the few bills against us and thereby put us beyond the reach of annovance. Come, friends, and help us out! We assured you that we intended to control the JOURNAL just as long as we felt disposed to do so, and we meant to do it at the time, and so far we have kept our word. Come up now and help us! For two years we have carried two thirds of our subscription list, and now we appeal to you to help us carry the load.

Yours, Most Respectfully, J. R. DURBORROW & CO.

The racing season was inaugurated last week, with unusual brilliancy. Jerome Park was crowded with the fashion of the city, and some very good time was made by the steppers. The amount of mous. Robert Bonner, the Ledger man, has nearly a half million in this kind of property, some of his horses being worth $30,000, if they could be bought at all. The Lorillards, the Leuozes, and all the rich families consider it essential to their standing to have more or less good horse-feeth, and ny fine day there can be seen in the park, and the first, young man of fashion thinking it necessary to have his fast horse out on a fine day in the park, and the drives there will be a said with them to drive. There is no betained that was any style at all are worth $1,200 spair; and they run from that according to style and training up to $5,000. This without any particular speed. Give a horse speed in addition to style, and the lucky breeder may set his own price, and get it. For this grade of stock the market is never overstocked. THE RING BUITS. The city has compromised with Sweeny, for about one-tenth of what he really stole. This leaves the Sweenys' rich, but Boss Tweed, it is said by those who profess to know his exact circumstances, will be left comparatively poor. But the Boss does not eare for that. He made friends when he had power, and he believes he can rally his old followers, and be once more the arbiter of New York polities. All he wants is to get out of jail, and get a chance to utter his war-cry once more. The old gangs who never had so generous a paymaster will rally around him, and he can undoubtedly obtain so much power in the city to make him essential to the more respectable politi-

Visitors to the Philadelphia Exposition will remember a colossal bronse arm and hand holding aloft a torch, which was on exhibition there. This is a part of a statue entitled "Liberty Enlightening the World," paid for by citizens of Paris, and donated to this country to be set up as a leacen light on Bedloe's Island, at the entrance of the 1-rbor of the city. The statue is of gigantic size, and the light from the torch illuminates a vast space. The statue is here, but New York is too mean to raise money to set it up, and there is a good prospect that it never will be taken out of the cases. It is a disgrace that the great city has not the courtesy and public spirit to make use of so generous and appropriate a gift.

are having a hard time of it. The softs who have heretofore bled for their benefit have not now the money to squander, and the poor gamblers are falling one by one. The effects of John Chamberlain, next to Morrissey the most noted fare bankers in the city, were sold at auction last week; and the rich furniture of his palace brought very small prices. It was a gorgeous concern three years ago. Every night at 12, a supper was set in the place, free to all, that could not have been had at Delmonico's for less than $5 a plate, to say nothing of wines. The most expensive dishes, cooked and served by French artists, with the most gorgeous service, and in a magnificently appointed room, was free to whoever chose to sit down to it. In those days it was nothing for rich men to lose those days it was nothing for rich men to lose Tyrone, stating that eadynances afforded these those days it was nothing for rich men to lose their thousands there, and Chamberlain was very rich. But he could not avoid gambling himself, and he would invest in race-tracks at Long Branch, and go into a great many speculations, and the hard times came on and fools either hadn't the money or had grown wiser, and so Chamberlain came to grief. He is a poor man to-day, and will stay so till the bucket gets full and begins to slop over. Such men only thrive when money is made very easily. Morrisey is more acute. When the over. Such men only thrive when money is made very easily. Morrisey is more acute. When the times were flush, he invested his profits in good shape and drew out of all kinds of gambling except that which could be run very cheaply. Something like twenty gambling houses have closed within the month, not by law, but by what is stronger than law, hard times. One of them went to Deadwood, leaving three wives and innumerable creditors. The wives were ignorant of each other's existence, till they all met at his place to see what had become of him. Another found himself ruined one night, and he did the world the only service he ever had, by blowing his brains out, in his rooms where thousands had been ruined. Others are keeping bars, that business flourishes yet, and a great number are living upon the women they once supported in luxury. It is a bad time for the gamblers.

PIRE-WORKS. The citizens are vigorously working to have the Authorities prohibit the use of fire-works on the coming fourth and forever after, except such as shall be used by the city initaregular demonstration. It is to be hoped it will succeed. Every Fourth of July the hospitals are crowded with persons injured by fire-works in the hands of reckless gamins, who delight in them; and every year there is a long list of property destroyed by the same agency. It is no small matter to have a hundred thousand little wretches armed with oraclers, torpedoes and the scores of other missiles, throwing them everywhere among horses and men, and into buildings. It is a wonder that the experience of Portland is not more frequently repeated, New York will be spared this terror, this year, and other cities should follow the example. - BUSINESS is frightfully bad, and there is every reason to suppose it will so continue till the fall crops move.

The South is doing rather more than usual, but the North and West are buying but little. It will be a dull summer.

He made long and diligent inquiry into the conducting plate Glass. He passed from the East to the West, and after extended examinations and tests, settled down to locating Plate Glass Works in the Juniata Valley. He expressed entire confidence in our ability, with our superior facilities, to manufacture in Belgium and France. He proposed the erection of works, at Huntingdon or Tyrone, stating that the advantages afforded these places in the fact that sand, coal and limestone, all within a radious of a few miles of them, was all the the advantages afforded these places in the fact that sand, coal and limestone, and the interface of the day or date of death, and are the conducts, and also to record said date of death with the other respectfully relate. It often happens that persons come from distant parts fo the country to procure letters testamentary or letters of decedents, and fail to bring with the estate respectfully. Approved, the 15th day of May, 1874.

It often happens that persons come from distant parts fo the country to procure l the case in regard to Huntingdon where the sand was within five or six miles, the coal within thirty and limestone right at hand—all in inexhaustible quantities. His proposition was to give the place the preference which would be most liberal in enthe preference which would be most liberal in encouraging the project. In this way an effort was made to create rivalry between Huntingdon and Tyrone. Mr. Gobert spent weeks in investigating the matter. He received propositions from both places offering the donation of a site at each place. After fully satisfying himself of the exact cost of living, labor, and in fact of everything entering into the problem of life in a manufacturing town, he sailed for Europe, promising to return by the first of January last. All this satisfied our people that M. Gobert, fils, meant business, and that he intended to erect Plate Glass Works some where in the Juniata Valley.

intended to erect Plate Glass Works some where in the Juniata Valley.

After his return to Belgium he kept up a correspondence with some of our citizens and kept them informed in regard to the progress of his intentions. He was fercely assaulted by those interested in Belgium Plate Glass Works and his motives impugned. His answer to the charges against him was sent over here and re-published. It was satisfactory and again gave our people confidence. confidence.
At last, about the first of May, M. Auguste Go.

At last, about the first of May, M. Auguste Gobert, fils, arrived at New York, with a French Civil Engineer, named M. Achille Brasseur, and came forward, at once, to this place, with their elaborate plans and specifications, and exhibited them to our people. The land offered to them, as a donation for a site, was promptly rejected and a site selected on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in West Huntingdon, and staked off. The buildings were enormous and our people became intensly interested and with a unanimity, never before manifested, came forward and offered to take stock because they saw in them labor and materials so necessary to their welfare. Mr. Gobert proposed that if the town would subscribe $100,000, that with the $200,000 which the Belgians proposed to invest, there would be no trougians proposed to invest, there would be no trou-ble in raising the remainder—$300,000—in the eastern cities. $500,000 looked like an enormous capital but it was not for Huntingdon to question. She was only asked to raise $100,000. This her itizens resolved to do and went at it with a will Her people reasoned that they would be repaid an hundred fold by the mere location of the works. The $100,000 at last was raised, after considerable effort, and leading citizens stood ready to guarantee their payment. Now, then, came the tug the country is left, without the necessary circulation. There must be some means found to remedy this evil even if we must so back to the old State or local banks.

The effort to conciliate Democrats in the Southern States, has not borne fruits of any great magnitude or peculiar lusciousness. On the other hand it looks as if that party is becoming all the stronger for the favors granted to it. The Democratic party is the Golden Calf in the Southern States, and every mother's son falls down and worships it regardless of the preachings and practices of all the Northers Meess that could be stacked up between Washington and New Orteans.

LITTLE BARRFOOT .- Barefooted boys have made their appearance, and they take particular pains to coat the skin of their pedals with a quantity of the thickest and blackest mud they can find. They are little shavers, and happiness shines out all over their faces on account of the shoes and stockings being laid aside for the warm season. It is an emancipation which the grown readers will recall from the storehouse of memory; of how years ago, other little boys, who have since battled hard with the problem of life, were so glad to throw aside their foot covering, and enjoy this freedom which comes to the urchin about the time the buds begin to burst. The soles were very tender for a time, but the skin soon hardened; the toes would occasionally get stubbed; but the pain was evanescent; a stone bruise on the heel was a moral certainty, but a fond mother knew how to poultice it at nightfall, and it was soon all right again. How well we remember all this, change has passed away forever.

And there was another thing connected with our freedom of those other days, which we still smile at as we recal! it. When coming home, tired with our day of play, the feet would semehow be hidden from view under a covering of sticky soil, and the imperative order would then be issued that the pedals E. F. The compensation always came on the morrow though, there was no pulling on of stockings and tedious lacing of shoes and somehow the same feet which were such an annoyance the night before now felt all the better for the cleaning process through which they had been put.

Hereto-fore the claims of workingmen, after getting into court, by being placed at the end of the list of causes, have often been so delayed from court to court that the plaintiff, from inability to be present when they come up, has been compelled to compromise a just claim to get a matter settled. This new law gives all such claims priority and so far is a real benefit to
