As usual, at the last, Democrats voted their ticket, while the labor tickets were recruited from the Republican party. This impaired our vote, and lost us the State, without doing the labor element any good. Other causes of a more general nature entered into the result, but of these we can speak more carefully hereafter.—
While it is possible that the result could not have been prevented, owing to the labor disturbances, it is also quite evident that a feeling of dissatisfaction, in Republican ranks owing to the President's policy, has had its influence. There has been a careless, indifferent, inactive spirit, even where there was no positive hostility.—

The action of the State Convention under the leadership of Mr. Conkling, is the principal topic of discussion. The aggressive portion of the party are those who hold office, and those who believe they would have been in office but for the attempt of the President to inaugurate reform in the civil service. This faction of the party applaud Conkling to the echo, and are bitter in their denunciation of Curtis. On the other hand, the solid man are fair representatives, assert that "Mr. Conkling's Convention," as they characterize the Rocheter gathering, did not represent the party at all, but that the people will sustain Mr. Curtis. They hold that not only the best element in the Republican party, but of the Democratic as well, are in hearty accord with the President, and that the attack of Conkling upon the Administration was not only a bad thing for the party, but is the death of that gentleman. There is no concealing fact that there is a deal of bitterness in the organization, and it crops out on all occasions as naturally as it did at Rochester. The Conkling people insist that they have made the party, and have maiatained it, and that to prevent such a man from that they have made the prevent such a man from using his influence because he happens to hold an office, is wrong. The President and his supporters take the event very quietly. Evarts says that no matter what the result of the elections may be, matter what the result of the elections may be, this fall, the people will sustain the policy when they come to see its practical effects. And the President says that he is doing exactly what he was pledged to do before the election, as he does not want another term, it is a matter for the people to do as they choose about it. And all Republi cans, except a few disappointed ones, say that Conkling should have followed the example of Blaine, and kept the party intact, and reserved his personal grievances till a more fitting time. THE COST OF CIGARS.

A very pretty little history came to me the other day. In 1870, a broker named Abbey was told by his physician that cigars were killing him; and his wife induced him to stop smoking, and give her the amount each day that he was in the habit of expending upon eigars. Now this rich man did not smoke common cigars,—not he. He could not satisfy himself with anything le ss than imported Havanus, that cost fifty cents and upwards, each, and he consumed a great many of them. But he did quit, and he did give his wife each day precisely what his cigar bill had been, and he kept it up faithfully About a month ago, Mr. Abbey went under, and he was very sore about it. He had neglected the usual precautions such people went under, and he was very sole about it. He had neglected the usual precautions such people take, and the house he lived in was taken out from under him, as well as all the pleasant accumulations of a lifetime. Mr. Abbey, last Monday morning, was an astonished man; for Mrs. Abbey took him out of the cheap hotel in which they had took him out of the cheap hotel in which they had taken refuge, and conducted him to a very neat and comfortable furnished house on 20th street, with everything in readiness to go to living, and all hers; she had invested it, and turned it over and over, until it had amounted to enough to pay for a delightful home, not much inferior to the one he had lost; and this was in his wife's name and could not be taken from her, and from this vantage point Mr. Abbey feels quite confident that he can go out, and regain his lost position. He saved his health Mr. Abbey leets quite condent that he can go out, and regain his lost position. He saved his health by quitting to-acco-his wife so managed as to give him a new start. A very comfortable wife to have, is Mrs. Abbey.

control of the General Government. It is the only safeguard the people have against rapacious railroad condinations, and the farmers of lowa is just as much interested in it as the merchant of New York. The railroads did their level best to keep up the tolls, that the carrying of the grains should be forced into their hands. Despite their efforts, the tolls were lowered, and the good effect was apparent. The amount of grain carried was largely increased, and the canal assumed somewhat the apparence of farmer years. Another movement. appearance of former years. Another movement in the right direction is being made. It is to close out, once for all, all the lateral canals that do not pay expenses, and make the Eric free of tolls. If this is done, and as an additional measure the is is sone, and as an additional measure the mail is enlarged so as to pass a larger boat, the y will recover its lost trade, and New York will again, what it was, the great exporting point the country. "Theo," a Love Storg. ty Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," is published this day by T. I. Pete son & Brothers, Philadelphia. Of the many excellent stories written by Mrs. Burnett. "Theo" is one of the very best and purest kind, as will as one of the most charming love stories we have ever read. Few characters in modern fiction are as lovable as the noble, warm-hearted, impulsive girl, from whom this novel takes its name. She dares everything for the man she loves, with a self-sacrifice, that for once at least, has its reward. The feelings wherewith it deals are no less true and profound than they are vividly portrayed. Mrs. Burnett, however, is always happy in her heroines. There are two of them alike, yet all are "tender and true;" full of womanliness and reflement, and at the same Lebanon people urge the erection of a new town hall.

This splendid number, besides over 50 engravings, contains a great amount of useful, practical, reliable, seasonable information, not only for the Farm and Garden, but for the Household, Children included. Most will get from it hints and suggestions worth Most will get from it hints and suggestions worth ten or twenty times its cost....... Better still, to send $1.60 and receive the paper, post-paid from now to the end of 1878—that is, all of volume 37, with the rest of this year free (Two copies for $1.50 each). Nowhere else can one get so much S1.50 each). Nowhere case can one get so much really valuable, paying information for so little money—not 3 cents a week, a sum easily saved or produced extra, which the paper will be sure to help one do. This Journal is prepared by practical men and women, who know what they talk and cal men and women, who know what they talk and write about from actual experience and large observation, and they can and do greatly aid others to profitable planning and working. Many single hints and suggestions each abundantly repay a year's cost. The fearlese exposures of quackery and humbugs in every number, are invaluable, and have saved its readers and the country millions of dellars. The departments for the Household and Children are pleasing and instructive. Every number of the paper is beautifully illustrated.
