Fall Care of Stock.

every variety must be kept in one uniform thriving condition, if money is to be made by raising them. They must be watched, so that whenever there is a slightest check to growth and the comely appearance of the flock or the herd, they can be moved to some better pasture or have some immediate stimulation, by giving food of a more strengthening quality. This is a season of the year requiring more than ordinary care, and early every cold morning something should be given to any colts, calves

It is not necessary to begin stabling at night because of moderate cold, for if the stomachs of animals are full of good food, the cold air is not disagreeable, and nature provides longer hair to assist in keeping them warm. Some people will be foolishly particular about shelter, but there is a medium, and if they are feed well out in the fields while the ground is dry, all kinds of young stock will be better for the grad-

THE TIME FOR IMPROVEMENTS .- This THE TIME FOR IMPROVEMENTS.—This is a time of low-priced labor, and many are glad to get work at the most reasonable rates. Men are tramping through the country everywhere begging because they have no work. Many of these would not have no work. Many of these would not work if they could, but a large proportion of them would work faithfully if they could be assured of their living and a very little besides. Crops have been very good this season, and the farmers can afford to employ a considerable portion of their surplus labor in improvements. They will never see a time when the waste places on the farm can be improved with so little outlay as now, and it behooves every owner of land to catch the present moment by making a slight investment in work that will, in many instances, add dollars to the value of every acre they possess. It is a great deal better thus, too, than to support

A DELICIOUS APPLE CUSTARD.-Take six acid apples of medium-size, a tumblerful of crushed sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter very little heaped, or two tumblerfuls of very rich, thick cream, six eggs, one lemon peel grated, half the juice; wel the apples and grate them, cream the butter and sugar together, beat the eggs separately, and mix as for cake.
