Whin up came a man in a hurry, And halted forninst the front dure; Said he, "are you Dennis the post ?" Said I, "gramachee ! to be shure."

Thin Biddy, who thought 'twas the Sheriff Wid writ and so forth number two, Was near letting dhrive wid a ladle; My wink caused the darlin' to rue.

Whin up came a cart wid a barrel-The horse was near gone wid his load, And dumping the cart right before us, The shiners rolled out on the road.

I ran for a bucket, and Biddy Wid more than a lunatic she Sat on, and attempted to cover, The whole of that beautiful pile.

We stowed it away in the closet, And sat down to laugh ourselves calm, And found a humane institution, Somewhere in the wilds of Siam.

We sint off manetime for a lawyer, To measure the worth of our pile, And find out the cash market value Of narrow guage rail roads per mile. We thought we should like a plantation of two or three States in the west, at waited to see if the lawyer Would think it was wise to invest.

The lawyer was long about coming, And I, in approaching the dure To look for him, trod on a wake place, That Biddy had scrubbed in the flure.
