ime under proper names, I have, in the legi timate and proper way, ascertained the real name of the "Citizen" who had an article in the JOURNAL of week before last, and in the Globe of last week. While reciprocating his friendship, as expressed in the Globe, I think it proper to call his attention to the fact that be has not furnished his "authority" for his statement in the JOURNAL, alluded to in my note. He is mistaken in stating that "Mr. Wilcox's physician assured me that the disease was not small-pox, and that then there was not the slightest danger." Even at that time there was no little alarm, and I could not go to see Mr. Wilcox conscientiously without ceasing for the time to perform my duty to others, as I had a strong suspicion then that the case might prove to be small-pox. But ome persons who blamed me for not visiting nim, afterwards blamed me for preaching, when they had passed from extreme reckless ness to extreme caution. It is not true, as he states, that a majority of my members protested against my preaching, but it is true, which he questions, that a committee of four was appointed to exclude infected persons, and that the church was properly ventilated, and fumigated. I did not cease to preach till the church was locked up by the Chief-of Police, and then submitted under protest, for at that time we were doing more for the public health, and the care of our members than was even attempted by the Town Council. As to those "fiendish" persons, to whom he alludes in the Globe, whatever may be true in regard to his own church. I am not aware that an ttended our church so utterly abandoned and eprobate. As to his other remarks it may uffice to say, that notwithstanding liabilities occurred, from "infection, the mistake of an architect, or a misplaced switch" it is still true that trusting in God, and using proper eans, missionaries still go abroad, and God' people continue to worship and travel. When God does not save them from calamity, he saves them in it. This gentleman's argumen proves too much, and would suspend public rship for an indefinite period, and might ave it subject to the will of those who wor hip little in public, and still less, if possible, a private. MR. RIDDLE REVIEWED.

MR. EDITOR :- I had fully decided in my own seems determined to "push the war into Africa, and follow with unrelenting fury the Borough au MR. Robt. McDivitt—Dear Sir.:—Having called at your house, and not finding you at home, I write to inform you that I did not call the people of Huntingdon "Devil Worshippers," as you may see by reading more closely, for did say that I would "carry on the meeting in spite of the Town Council, and the devil." Your other personalities I can afford to disregard, but respect tally demand that you give your authority for the following statement. "I have it from the most." which his articles abound. The minister of the gospel, above all others, should be a law-abiding citizen, and as such is entitled to respect, so long as he respects himself, but when he descends to villineation and abuse he forsakes his proper calling, and his influence for good is about at an end, in that locality at least.

He says "the church,"—and I suppose he means the churches—only ask "to be let alone in their appropriate work," and that they ask no favors at the hands of the State. In reply to this I would say the churches have from time to time asked and received such legislation as they received. They have asked for exemption from taxation and have have asked for exemption from taxation and have to a very large extent received it. They have ask-ed and received special and very rigid enactments in regard to the disturbance of any religious meet-ing, and for the protection of their property, &c. "Neither our National Legislature," he says, 'nor that of any State has ever assumed authority to suppress public worship. for any cause.' &c. This is simply untrue. How is it to-day with Topeka, Kansas, and how was it three years ago with Schuylkill Haven, in Schuylkill county, where the Thinking it best to exchange views at this authorities not only closed the schools and church authorities not only closed the schools and churches, but actually fenced in and isolated the town, requiring the railroad trains to run through it at nut speed, without stopping?

He says, "in 1871, I held a successful meeting in Altoona, while the small-pox was, for the time, far more fatal than here." Here I beg leave to differ. The fatality in this place has been unparalleled, as I will presenty show. "It came to an end in about eix weeks, he says, "with no closing of schools or churches." It is unnecessary to say that there is no similarity between the two cases. The physicians reported promptly the existence of the disease, instead of wrangling for about six weeks amongst themselves as to whether twas small-pox or chicken-pox, and even then, and the precautionary measure of closing the schools and churches been adopted, it might have ended in haif the time. He says, "that it is hard to tell what public opinion is, as many do a great deal of thinking." Now, it is not at all difficult to determine the drift of public opinion it you will mix a little with the people, and as for the thinking and tabling if some of new would do more of nix a little with the people, and as for the think-ing and talking, if some of us would do more of the former and less of the latter, it would, perhaps, be better for ourselves and for the community. He says "Trustees have no legal power either to dose a church or hand it over to the civil authorities." This is a question for the lawyers; but there seems to be very little doubt as to the authority of the Borough Council in such case, as is abundantly evident from the precedents already cited. He addits that a considerable number of his memoers were in favor of closing the church, and improve; the opportunity to administer a summary ribuke to those who from indisposition summary Floure to those who from indisposition or inability fail to attend. Perhaps it would be more in conformity to the duties of a pastor, now that he has a little leisure, to visit those non-attendants and ascertain from them the real cause of their absence, taking care at the same time to preserve a safe distance from any one who was preserve a safe distance from any one who was afflicted with any thing that "might prove to be small pox." He might in this way perhaps, ascertain what some of them think of his conduct. "The great majority of our spiritual worshippers," he says, "are opposed to it." This "great majority" exists only in his own fertile imagination, as any one knows who is at all conversant with the sentiments of our citizens.

But, Mr. Riddle says there have been only nine deaths, which he seems to treat as a very trifing leaths, which he seems to treat as a very trifling deaths, which he seems to treat as a very triling matter in comparison with the paralyzation of business, he cutting off of social communication, and the unnecessary annoyance occasioned. Now, at happened to be thirteen deaths instead of nine, or about fifty per cent. of the entire number of small-pox cases, which is a fatality unparalleled even in the worst stages of the disease in our large cities. One out of every five or six, I am informed is about the usual average, while here, it has mineral sedatives and powerful narcottes which, though they may for a time exert a soporific influence upon the brain, soon cease to act, and invariably injure the tone of the stomach. The Bitters on the contrary, restore activity to the operations of that all important early decay loss of manhood, &c., I will send a corresponding to the contrary of manhood, &c., I will send a corresponding to the contrary of manhood, &c., I will send a corresponding to the designation of the contrary of manhood, &c., I will send a corresponding to the designation of following their lifeless remains to the grave, and there paying the last mourning the pretitioned to pass a law establishing Justices of Courts, in which trifling misdemeanors can be settled, and thus save the large sums usually expended by taking such cases before the county courts. schools a heavy privation compared with that to which they are called upon to submit?

And now, in behalf of the Borough authorities, I will only add that their course in refusing to open the churches at the present time, is endorsed by at least nine-tenths of the citizens of the town, and as I have not yet seen any thing in the shape of argument to the contrary, I can see no valid reason why all good citizens should no join in upholding and sustairing them, and hus, instead of the cyclasting fault-finding and grumbling at those who are endeavoring to discharge their unpaid duties, rendering their burden lighter by a cheerful obedience. It is customary, and no doubt justifiable, for our ministers, especially in the cicheerful obedience. It is customary, and no doubt justifiable, for our ministers, especially in the cities, during the hot sesson, to vacate their pulpits and leave their churches and congregations to take care of themselves while they spend some six weeks at some fashionable watering place, and it this be admissible on the ground that it is necessary for the health of the minister, why should not the same rule hold good now during the cold season when not only the health of the minister but that of the town and community demands it? It is a very noor rule that will not work both ways. that of the town and community demands it? It is a very poor rale that will not work both ways. Is there not enough of vital piety amongst our church-going citizens to endure this privation for the public good. Cannot the opportunity be improved in a more diligent study of our bibles at home, and in more of closet communion with our Father that heareth and seeth in secret. More of Bible study and less of fashionable church-going would no doubt make better men and better women of all of us. If the lessons of the Book of books were heeded, instead of "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," it would be betbooks were heeded, instead of "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," it would be better for the ror christianity, and better for the world. I read there the lesson that I would enjoin on others, of obedience to the higher powers, inasmuch as "the powers that be, are required of God," and as a citizen, I must protest against the sweeping denunciation and un upported assertions, from time to time indulged in by Mr. Riddle, as disreputable to himself and discreditable to us. What opinion would the outside world entertain of us, were his insane ravings credited? They would have to say that we were a community of savages; that we were under a municipal government more tyran nical and more cruel than that of Nero, and held in subjection by a code of laws more bloody than nical and more cruel than that of Nero, and held in subjection by a code of laws more bloody than that of Draco; that the air was fall of "unmitiga-ted falsehoods" and "lying wonders;" that our courts of justice were conducted and run in the in-terest of the rumsellers, and that our town was a "paradise of fools." Indeed I should not be sur-prised, if this state of affairs continues within "paradise of fools." Indeed I should not be surprised, if this state of affairs continues, within another week to hear the assertion boldly made that the Chief of Police was in the habit of arresting the citizens from the country on their way to market, confiscating their eggs and butter and confining them in the small pox hospital; that the Board of Health actually seized an old lady, supposed to have small-pox, and buried her alive; that the Burge-s had ordered a Catholic Priest to be publicly whipped for saying High Mass on Sunday, and that the Town Council had roasted and ate a Methodist minister, for refusing to close his church. I sincerely hope that Mr. Riddle may be induced to let up a little on this subject, or it not, if he believes there is reality in the pic or it not, if he believes there is reality in the pi ture which his imagination has wrought, that he will make haste to leave the doomed city and flee for his life, tarrying not in all the plains, ncr looking behind him, and that he will stand as far from it as Lot did from Sodom in her evil day.
