All Works for Good.

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God."—Rom. viii. 28.
All things, dear Lord! Is there no thread of love that links us to Thee? In the cloud of covenant divine? Set in the cloud of covenant divine? I know that all Thy full designs are bright; The darkest threads grow golden in Thy hand; That bending lines grow straight—the tangled right—The bitter drops all sweet as Thy command.
Command the sweetness! Make the crooked straight; And turn these dusky tangled threads of gold! Swift, dear Lord! I cannot longer wait; Faith hath grown weary—longing to behold.
I know the promise; but I crave the sight; I yearn to see the beautiful design; To hail the rose-dim of the morning light; To watch the straightening of the bended line.
Why these enigmas? Wherefore not receive Thy bright solution? Then a voice drew near: "Behold as they who see not, yet believe!" And One I knew approached, and wiped my tear.
With wounded hand, and aghed. Ah! then I fell Down on my knees, and held Him by the feet, My Lord! My God! Ah, all, all, all well! With Thee, the dark is light, the bitter sweet!

Power of Habit.
Rev. N. L. Brakeman, of Frankfort Ind., is delivering a course of lectures to the young people of his congregation on "The harmony between the Bible truth and human experience." One lecture on the formation of habit, and power of habit closes in these words:
Of what we have said on the subject, this is the sum:
Little acts, carelessly done at first, repeated until they run into custom; custom forms a habit; habits crystallize into character, and character makes immortal destiny. So that habits may yet bind the soul in chains of eternal fate.
A flake of snow is a light and little thing, but flake as make the avalanche which shakes the mountain in its fall, overwhelms the city and floods the valley. That spark from the electric wheel is a little thing; but it is electricity that leaps, in the lightning's bolt, from the storm cloud, shatters the giant oak of the forest, and makes the earth tremble to the pulsations of its power. That fantastic spray of frost upon the window pane is a small thing, but it is frost that makes the great icebergs, floating in the Northern seas, and grinding to atoms the strongest ships caught between their ponderous bodies. Sands from the globe; drops fill the vast ocean's bed; and stars form the innumerable shining hosts that crowd infinite space. Learn well the lesson which flakes and sparks, and sands, and drops, and stars would teach. Take care of the little, and guard well the beginnings of thoughts, desires, and deeds. A little careless habit, may end in a waste of fortune, a blighted name, a wrecked soul, a ruined life, and a wretched immortality. Every habit is the representative of almost infinite power for weal or woe; for time and for eternity.
Thus have we traced the power of habit, and seen in it a law of sin and the soul; of character of life; of time and eternity. So does sin invade the soul. So helps sin man when bound by the cords of iniquity. And so do eternal consciousness, personal experience, and human history harmonize and demonstrate the truth of the Bible teaching on the subject. I close with these lines of the poet:
Habit, at first, is but a silken thread.
Fine as the light-winged gossamer that sways in the warm sunbeam of a summer's day;
A shallow streamlet rippling o'er its bed;
A tiny sapling 'ere its roots are spread;
A yet unhardened thorn upon the spray;
A lion's whelp that hath not tasted prey;
A little smiling child obedient to its sire.
Beware!
That thread may bind thee as a chain;
That streamlet gather to a fatal sea;
That sapling, sprung from a favored tree,
That thorn, grown hard, may wound and give thee pain;
That whelp, his murderous fangs revealed;
That child, a giant grown, may crush thee "neath his heel."
—N. Y. Advocate.

It Pays to Know How.
When a farmer has a good farm, and fails to make a good living from it without running in debt, the cause must be that he doesn't know how to manage a farm. I annex an illustration from an agricultural paper: "One man sows a crop of beans. He doesn't know much about raising them, but he thinks he will try it. He gets barely enough to pay for his labor, and concludes that it doesn't pay to raise beans. Another man knows all about raising them. He has not only tried every variety, nor every kind of manure and culture, but he knows what others have done, and how they have succeeded best. He adds their experience to his own, and selects the best seed, sows it at the proper season, the right distance apart, and covers it the proper depth in soil manured and prepared in the best manner. He does not stop here. He begins early to cultivate, weed thoroughly, hoe often—and harvests seventy tons to the acre. Does this pay for knowing how and doing his work in the best manner? The man who sows onions without learning the best way, gets the wrong seed, puts it in ground that is not suitable for it, sows it at the wrong season, doesn't sow it thick enough because the seed cost too much, doesn't sow it evenly because he cannot afford to buy a seed drill, covers it unevenly and his crop is a failure. The man who has taken the trouble to find out how to raise onions, and what kind to sow, raises one thousand bushels per acre. So it pays in farming to know what to do and how to do it, and to make the best use of the experience of others. And what is true of onions or beans, is true in a greater or less degree, of all other kinds of farm produce."

Ground Grain.
The Western Farm Journal can scarcely be in earnest when it expresses the opinion that neither cooked nor ground grain promotes growth or increases flesh in animals commensurate with the expense of grinding; it also claims that there are many cases in which the feeding of whole grain has given as great a gain when meal has been used; certainly such a doctrine will not do in Pennsylvania, even with an Iowa indorsement. The nutriment of the grain is inclosed in minute sacks of partially indigestible matter. When the grain is fed whole many of these escape the action of the teeth and gastric juice and are lost. The effect of grinding is to rupture these and render their contents available. Steam or heat will make sure all which may have escaped the action of the mill stones and economize the whole. Theoretically, each of these operations is entitled to a certain amount of credit for the work which it performs, and in the final account must be compared with the cost. If the latter exceeds the benefit, a proper and natural observer of economic rules will lead to the abandonment of either cooking or grinding or both. After fair experiment, we are ready to give up the former, but not the latter. So long as the grain can be ground for one-tenth of its value, the balance is certainly on the miller's side, and we think no practical farmer will oppose the theory that eight bushels properly ground is as valuable as ten fed whole.

Religious Duties.
Many persons have an idea that they are free from religious duties until they agree to be bound by them. They think that attendance upon worship, the support of the Church, the avoidance of unprofitable amusements, and the maintenance of good Christian character may be binding upon the acknowledged Christian, but they do not apply to the irreligious man—especially the avowed skeptic. But moral obligation is not created by contract, nor does it depend upon belief. It requires no contract to bring a man within the range of God's physical laws. Disregard of the laws of health is punished, irrespective of the ignorance or disbelief of him who disregards them. Strenuous would kill, even though the victim did not believe in the power of poison or the fact of death; and so of the moral laws; it requires no contract to bring man under their authority. By the very nature of his being he is under their authority. There can be no evasion of the laws by which God carries on his moral government. They must be obeyed or disobeyed. Among these laws are the duties pertaining to the Church of Christ that Church is a most important part of that moral government. Indeed, it is, on earth, the very embodiment of that moral government. It is the duty of every one to whom that Church is presented, to enter it, sustain it, and to be confirmed in conduct and character by its teachings. Each one of these duties is binding; and the non-performance of the first—that of entering the Church—by no means lessens the obligations of the others, nor does disregard of all either change their nature or diminish their force. The Divine law, which lays these duties upon every one, is an eternal fact; and neither its existence nor its power is in any way affected by man's belief concerning it.

Thorns.
The highways of life are thickly set with thorns. Everywhere they spring up from north to south. The thorns which offend wound, and with sharpest sting, are those we ourselves plant along the wayside of our pilgrimage—thorns we plant in carelessness, in selfishness, in pride and in passion. And we come in short and painful contact with them, perchance, in long years afterward.

Statistics show that the American people eat more butter than bread—at least the value of the butter annually consumed is greater than the yearly supply of wheat. So says an able writer upon the subject.
Within fifty years the number of varieties of tomatoes has increased from three to one hundred.

Medical.

VEGETINE.
PURIFIES THE BLOOD, RENOVATES AND INVIGORATES THE WHOLE SYSTEM.
ITS MEDICAL PROPERTIES ARE ALTERATIVE, TONIC, SOLVENT, AND DIURETIC.

RELIABLE EVIDENCE.
Mr. H. R. STEVENS.
Dear Sir,—I will most cheerfully add my testimony to the great number you have already received in favor of your great and good medicine, Vegetine, for I think that for several years I have been a sufferer from the disease, Catarrh, and had such bad coughing spells that it would seem as if I were going to die. I have tried many other medicines, but have not found any that do me any good. I have taken your medicine, and I think it is one of the best medicines that I have ever used. I feel better than I have for years. I have no cough, and my stomach is better. I feel like a new man. I am very grateful to you for your medicine. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
H. R. STEVENS,
Cor. Magazine and Walnut Sts., Cambridge, Mass.

GIVES HEALTH, STRENGTH, AND APPETITE.
My daughter has received great benefit from the use of Vegetine. Her declining health was due to general debility, and a few bottles of Vegetine restored her health, strength and appetite. I am very grateful to you for your medicine. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
MRS. A. A. DIXON,
No. 40 Sears Building, Boston.

VALUABLE REMEDY.
Mr. H. R. STEVENS—Dear Sir,—I have taken your medicine, Vegetine, for several years, and I am convinced it is a valuable remedy for Dyspepsia, Catarrh of the Stomach, and all the ailments of the system. I can heartily recommend it to all who are afflicted with any of these complaints. I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
MRS. MURPHY PARKER,
