The present legislature is eminently a moral one if the prevalence of moral measures, however, is that after they are introduced they are either forgotten or lost in the voluminous files, or if they chance to rise to the surface of legislation, they are most summarily informed we have anti-oremation—anti-"treating" and anti-tobacco bills, all of which will, without much doubt, when the proper time comes, go to meet the ill-fated Local Option bill. One of the most warmly contested bills in the House this session has been the one probibiting all shows and exhibitions on the Sabbath day, in cases where a fee for admission is charged. As before stated this bill was primarily intended to close the Philadelphia Zoological Gardens on Sunday, but when it was introduced petitions for its passage poured into the legislature from all parts of the State. The Philadelphia delegation, however, were almost unanimously opposed to its passage, and finally on last Monday night they succeeded in killing the bill. After considerable fillibustering on the part of its friends to prevent its present consideration in two was in the prevalence of moral measures, however, is that after they are introduced they are either forgotten or lost in the surface of legislature, have anti-oremation—anti-"treating" and anti-tobacco bills, all of which will, without much doubt, when the proper time comes, go to meet the ill-fated Local Option bill. The bill to prevent the taking or charging of more than the legal rate of interest was this year especially championed by Speaker Myer. On its final passage on Tuesday, Mr. Osbourne, of Philadelphia attempted, but failed, to have a provise exempting Building Associations from its provisions inserted in the bill. The year and nays were called on the final passage of the bill and seemed to have resulted favorably. Certain members demanded at this point that their names should be recorded or correction be made in the manner in which they had been recorded, which corrections would have changed the result. The Speaker refused to allow any such changes and so the bill Southern rights have again been trampled upon and the Southern heart fired. This heart has been fired so often that there is danger of its bursting. This time would have changed the result. The speak is fused to allow any such changes and so the bill was declared passed in the midst of great excitement and uproar in the House.

Legislative investigations are becoming varied in character and wide inscope. Yesterday in both Senate and House, the feyer of investigation ran high Content Pipels investigation are it is fired in defense of the sacred right of free whiskey. Several illicit distillers of Pickens county, South Carolina, were arhigh. Senator Fisher introduced a resolution pro-viding that the Senate Finance Committee be in-structed to inquire whether or not the Department of Internal Affairs, (General McCandlass' office) rested and placed in the bastile of said county. This fired the Southern heart and they were liberated by their friends and are now at large. The people of South Carolina don't seem well versed in the principles of the excise law. As the revby to the rescue, with an amendment to include the other State departments in the investigation. And now we may look for a "cracking of skulls" and a general shaking amongst the dry bones.

In the House, Judge Walker, of Wayne county, to be in the fashion sent in his petition to be inenue officers approached a cabin in the mountains, where a small still was at work "oft' in the stilly night," they were met by the glitter of bowie knives and cavern ous looking shot guns, and told to leave, quick. Being in the minority, they bowed to the expressed will of the majority, but thought it best to enter a minority protest; when one of them said, "Why don't you pay tax on your whiskey? You surely don't want to defraud the Govern ment of its just dues!" To whom the man in the mountains responded in a speech whose force and elegance will make it for ever classic, and place it side by side with the speech of Logan. Said he, "We raise our own corn, make our own whiskey and drink it ourselves, and what in the has the Government to do with it?" As the minions of the law could not explain this matter satisfactorily, they left. Pickens county people are now in a state of semi-rebellion, but their course is a much more noble one than that of 1861. Then a Tonic medicine. But if his Excellency has doubts, why not let the wisdom of the past suggest a remedy? Some visiting statesmen, in the capacity of a Commission, would greatly simplify the matter. If the same fellows who went to New Orleans "to see which government could best sustain itself, and by all means to make the Nicholl's Government that one, were called from their political retirement and sent to Pickens county, instructed to inquire which could best sustain themselves, the revenue officers or the moonlight distillers, the matter could be adjusted, and with much more credit to the commission, and much less criminality on the part of the Presi- TAPE WORM REMOVED ALIVE dent.
