The Republican County Committee will meet at the Court House, in Huntingdon, on TUESDAY, APRIL 16th, at one o'clock, P. PROFESSIONAL APPRENTICESHIPS.

It must be apparent, to the most casual observer, that our leading professions are becoming entirely too much crowded. There is no longer room for the novice and the bungler. Only those who are learned, skilled and proficient and, who are backed by good, sound discriminating judgment, can succeed. The day was when the demand exceeded the supply and any lunk. head could enter the office of a lawyer or physician and, after a few months of indifferent study, launch out to impose upon his fellow men, but that day is rapidly passing and the sooner it does the better. The American people have been more outrageously swindled, in this respect, than all the civilized world besides.

an illustration : He is some young man who has been raised on a farm or spent his chiel iron company, and by their destructime in attending school until he was old | tion the company has incurred a loss of enough to teach school. At the age of about $10,000. twenty-one he is entered to read law with tee who spend an hour or so in asking ran- of $500 dollars was upon his head. dom questions, many of which the ques. tioners would find difficulty in answering themselves, on account of rustiness, and he is declared competent to go out and impose upon his neighbors. What does he know? Absolutely nothing. He has had no training whatever. Everything in the practice is as foreign to him as Hebrew. His mind has had no preparation whatever outside of the little impractical reading. never sold a pound of butter or calculated half a dozen partial payments in his life. when her husband and the bear were fight this man hangs out a shingle and begins licks. to practice law! Great Cæsar! Men who find themselves in the meshes of the law suppose every one who opens an office able to help them out, and they employ him. The result is he knows nothing; he misleads them; gives them bad advice, and his clients in the end find themselves a thousand times worse off than if they had made terms with their antagonists in the beginning. No Bar is exempt from this sort of experience. It is the case all over the country. What is said here of lawyers is equally true of physicians. They as a rule are, if anything worse than lawyers, because it seems that whenever a favorite son is fit for nothing else a doting father will make a physician out of him. He may figure as a physician when he would starve as a lawyer. But the day for doing away with this sort of imposition and swindle is dawning rapidly. There is no necessity for it. We want laws compelling apprenticeships to professions. No man should be admitted. to practice law who has not been an apprentice to the business. He ought to be taught practical business at every step through college, and then put into a law office at least four or five years where there is business done. He should not be admitted to practice until he is twenty-five years of age and not then until he has passed a thorough examination before a Board established for the purpose. This is absolutely necessary to protect persons from the incompetent impositors who are to be found everywhere, and who know no law and whose minds are as little calculated to unravel the intricacies of legal lore as that of the man who never heard of Coke-upon-Littleton, or any other of the illustrious legal commentators. A man should be brought up to the business. This is the only way in which great lawyers and great physicians can be made. It is only by bringing them up-by educating them in this manner—that the public can have any assurance against imposition. The bungling of lawyers and physicians exceeds that of any other class of men in America. If the mechanic and laborer were to be guilty of half the stupidity that is daily apparent in the professions they would be sent adrift to starve. Legislation is badly wanted on this subject and the sooner it is had the bet ter. It should regulate the manufacture of these professionals and it ought to regulate their fees. The professional class is a favored class, and the laws should regulate the extent of their charges. When will our Solons, who are generally made up of a large majority of professional men, give this subject their attention.

An effort is being made to snake a bill through the Legislature which is intended to fasten the school books, now in use, upon the schools of the Commonwealth for the next six years to come. This should be promptly voted down. What we want is a respectable term for all books introduced, and a proviso fixing the price. School books, as now sold, cost one hundred per cent. more than they should cost. Every inducement is offered to get them introduced, but no sooner are they introduced than the price is run up to intolerable

It is hardly necessary to intimate that the people will not, at the coming Congressional election, elect men to represent them who are the immediate representatives of any of the monied institutions of the country. Education for the People of the South,

-NATIONAL DUTIES AND RESPONSIBIL ITIES.

To enable the general Government to per form to its fullest extent the duty of self-preservation will require a change in the fundachange that ought to be made, but without which the Government may still do much for itself, for classes and for communities. What ever it may do now, however, must be done at the request or with the assent of the States by permission of the local governments, which should be subordinate to the national author ity, but which in matters of education are superior to it. When they ask that the resources of the nation be diverted from their usual course and turned into the State treasuries for the support of public schools, they should be met in a liberal spirit and with a readiness to make large and generous concessions. To the South, in behalf of which an appeal for help has been made, the Government should extend its hand, and while proffering the monev should prescribe the terms upon which it is to be accepted, the purposes for which it is to be used, and the manner in which it is to be expended. It is not for the recipient of a favor, especially for one who asks for it, to fix New Orleans, has had a decision of the courts

If it be competent for Congress to provide by law 'that the net proceeds of sales of pub-lic lands shall forever be consecrated and set apart for the education of the people," as is proposed in the bill agreed upon by the House Committee on Education and Labor, it has the same power to regulate every detail of the system of education, to the support of which the fund may be applied. It may lay down a system to be adopted by the States, accepting this benefit, and may make any departure from it a reason for withholding aid from the State that may be guilty of the act. It may require that each State shall have but one system, equally applicable to whites and blacks; that no distinction shall be made in the facilities afforded to different classes; that they shall have the same accommodations as to buildings, teachers, text-books, methods of instruction, branches taught, and whatever else may appertain to the subject; or, better still, nay secure exact justice and impartiality by may secure exact justice and impartiality by prohibiting discrimination in any manner or form, even by establishing separate schools for the races; and anything short of this will be unfair to the weaker and more ignorant race, the one that is most in need of help, and on account of which there is a disposition render that aid that must be so materially render that aid that must be so materially beneficial to the whole South. There is no limit to which Congress may not go when its right to grant money is acknowledged, for that body may follow by legislation every appropriation it may make until the last panny is expended, the conditions being prescribed at the time the grant is made.

The General Government has, therefore, not less power in the premises than if control of the subject of education were expressly given it by the Constitution. The difference is, that the States are not now bound to accept the money if the terms upon which it is given are unsatisfactory to them. If Congress should do as I have suggested, the objection may be raised in the South that it is an interference with State rights. But it should be remempered there that the South herself has invited the interference, if such it he, She has proclaimed her poverty, her utter inability to pro-vide the means of instruction for her great mass of ignorant people, and confesses that without help she must remain in her present without help she must remain in the present condition, laboring under all the disadvanta-ges which a large illiterate population gives her, for an almost unlimited period. Which will she prefer—to remain in this deplorable state, or to accord absolute and perfect impartiality and equality to all classes and col-ors in educational matters? If the former, then she assumes the position of the starving man, who, when offered bread, refused it because he had a right to eat meat. Of what value are rights to those who are powerless to use them, when the very object they desire to attain through those rights are offered them? Why will the Southern States insist upon adopting systems of education for themselves when they

COOPER & CONARD'S ADVERTISEMENT ABOUT DRY - GOODS.

The success of past seasons in collecting. from markets of the world, fabrics suited to the clothing of man, woman, and child, has had a tendency to make us feel that our experience has given us a kind of intuitive knowledge of what will be wanted each coming season, so seldom do we err in the selections, although many things are contracted for months before wanted

For the coming spring and summer we have in store a larger stock than ever, and are still daily receiving goods from not only home manufacturers but from those abroad. each steamer arriving at this port having its quota for our house.

Persons at a distance can by writing us have a catalogue sent them, or samples of specialities if preferred. A visit, though, which incurs no obligation to buy, would be most satisfactory.
