A very earnest and determined for himself, but for every one who may be effort was made by nearly one-half of the members of the Pittsburgh convention to oust Mr. Wallace from his high position of dictatorship, but they were powerless against his self-assumed authority. It is he who should first be dethroned, and if there are none in his own party who can do so, the Republicans must do the work for them.

DEMOCRATIC despatches from Washington City are authority for the statement that the Platform adopted by the Pittsburgh convention was prepared by Senator Wallace in Washington and read to several gentlemen there before he left for Pittsburgh. Mr. Wallace has established a reputation for always having the documents ready in time. He is almost as prompt now as when he furnished the naturalization papers not many years ago. It was not necessary, however, that the Platform should bear any special evidences of old age, and it was not, therefore, colored with coffee, whatever other marks of antiquity it may have about it. Any papers requiring the tinge of "the sear and yellow leaf" will be duly prepared and produced when needed to manufacture a majority for Mr. Wallace's ring ticket.
