SUDDEN DEATH.-The Lewistown Ga zette, of Wednesday of last week, records the following terrible accident: About half past 6 o'clock on Monday evening Conrad William, son of Henry Dumpman, engineer at Glamor-gan Furnace No. 2, met an instantaneous death under the following circumstances: He, with one or two other boys were about the furnace, and found their way into the tower inside of which the cage conveys ore to the top of the funnel head. They were cautioned by one of the hands, he knowing the top of the funnel-head. They were cautioned by one of the hands, he knowing that to be a dangerous place for boys, as the cage descends the entire sixty feet in two seconds. Around the oval inside runs a banister, and the cage passes up and down with about four inches play. It is supposed with about four inches play. It is supposed the boy was looking down over this banister when the cage descended with its usual velo city, catching his head and breaking the banister in drawing him down through the fourinch space. Such must have been the force that instant death followed. > ANOTHER SCOUNDREL TURNED UP .-On Friday afternoon last a stranger called at the residence of Mr. Adam Maus, in West Huningdon, and informed Mrs. Maus that her husband had torn his pantaloons and had sent bim to procure another pair for him, to enable him to get home. Mrs. Maus, who had read, the evening before, an account of a stranger swindling an Altoona gentleman out of a pair of pantaloons, remarked that perhaps he was practicing the same game, and she was loath to hand over the pantaloons. The man as-sured her that such was not the case, and that he had been sent by her husband. After a little more hesitation she went to the wardrobe, took out her husband's "Sunday-go-tomeetin'" pantaloons and handed them over when the stranger started in the direction of the P. R. R., shops, where Mr. Maus is employed as foreman, but it is needless to say that he never reached that place. When Mr. Maus returned home his wife was made aware that she had been the victim of a very neat swindle. WORLD" what "Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry" has done for me. I had a violent cough, night sweats, sore throat, great weakness, with severe attacks of hemorrhage; gave up all hope of recovery. I am now cured, a sound and hearty man. Edward H. Hamson, engineer at Syrup, Patter, Patter, 134 Ridge avenue, Philadel. known of the accident until the hand went in to fill the cage with ore when he saw the body lying at the foot of the tower. Coroner Trout held an inquest at the close of which the jury rendered a verdict, the substance of which is that he came to his death by being caught by the hoisting cage at Glamorgan Furnace No. 2, while leaning over the banister on the first floor. The cage evidently struck the back part of his head, mashing it considerably, and crushing the side of his face; an indentation was discovered on his stomach also, and he was found to be otherwise injured.
