HON. J. M. ATKINS, member of Congress from Tennessee, will please accept our thanks for favors from Washington.

THE Cincinnati Commercial nominates Hayes for a second term. That won't do. He can't write another letter of acceptance after what he said in the first one.

THE Nationalists of Massachusetts are determined to nominate General Butler for Governor. They point to him as the "coming man." A little too late-Mrs. Jenks pointed to him first. She made him becoming man.

THE nominal Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee is only to play a subordinate part in this campaign after all. Wallace will color the papers have pursued their own judgment and the Speer is only to grind the coffee.

THE patronage among the first-class hotels in New York is constantly changing from one hotel to the other. The Grand Central hotel has recently incited the direst wrath of its competitors by offering the same accommodations for one and two dollars less than the others.

Oh! you would rather hear the rebel yell, would you? This isn't the first time we have tried to drown that with cheers for Grant. The more cheering for him the less cheering it is for the "lost cause," and therefore we won't stop it.

THE rejoicing over the adjournment of Congress will be of short duration. Our joy will be turned to sorrow in December next. It meets again. Oh! that our fathers had foreseen this Congress and made some provision against so great an inflic tion upon their posterity!

No wonder the Democrats encourage third parties-Labor Reformers, Greenbackers, Nationalists, Communists, or whatever else their name may be. They are trying to accomplish the same result here.

THE Democrats of Cambria have put the following ticket in the field: Assem. bly, L. D. Woodruff and John Fenlon; register and recorder, J. G. Let us imagine a similar process applied to a Democratic Congressman. Of course it is not necessary that all Democrats who go to Washington as representatives be subjected to it. Most of them are broken to harness before going. They have been habituated to the partisan bridle and are perfectly familiar with the bit. But it is the small number that usually has to be caught like wild horses that makes the capture comparatively easy. When one of them comes there unrestrained by the party traces or jumps out of them and scampers off over the plains of political freedom, and who founds his claim upon an authority which to him is equal to that by which man was given dominion over the rest of creation. The too independent or recalcitrant member soon learns that he is too There has never been a Congress of the United whether a contract made to-day would have any value to-morrow. A man dared not make a purchase, for he might read in the newspapers next morning that some new duty or tax had been laid upon his goods; he dared not sell, for the tax might be in the same abrupt way reduced, or he might suddenly find himself compelled to accept payment in some new currency of little worth. The whole winter through and far along into the summer has the country been thus kept in constant uneasiness, and though Congress has finally adjourned without doing anything of much consequence it will take some time to recover from the demoralizing effects of this long uncertainty, and meanwhile another session will be close upon us with all its frightful possibilities.

Mr. Conger's resolution simply prohibited the payment of any Rebel claim growing out of the late war, and its presentation threw the Democrats of the House into a panic. The Northern Democrats voted on the side of the North, but sixty-one members voted against this straightforward measure of protection for the Treasury. In other words 61 members of the House, all of whom will probably be found to be Southern Democrats, and many of whom are undoubtedly ex-Rebels, voted that Rebel claims ought to be paid from the Treasury. There are people who seem unable to believe that Mr. Tilden's letter on Southern elaims effended the South. ACTIVITY AND SUCCESS.

The central organ of the Democracy, at Harrisburg, foreshadowing the plans of signs of the times point to an unusually quiet political campaign in Pennsylvania this year." This is not so much a conclusion arrived at from their point of view, as it is an expression of what they desire, for indeed all the indications are the other way. Why a great political party claimin purity, in honesty, and in everything else that would entitle them to popular support, should have an anxiety to preven their claims from being discussed, from having the interest of the people awakened in regard to them, from creating, in fact, a public excitement in their favor, is one of the things which to persons outside of that party is inexplicable and which they themselves refuse to explain. An individual of fair reputation never objects to having his character commented upon and discussed openly and publicly. Why is it not so with parties? Why do the Democrats prefer private work and secret scheming as a means of carrying out their purposes? It is because their boasted abiliity to govern the country and provide for the public welfare better than other parties is a sham and a fraud, because their plans will not bear the light of day.

The Republican party never desires a quiet campaign, or "a still hunt," as Tilden calls it. After having been in power eighteen years, it is willing to go before the country upon its record. Any faults the scale against the other, will show an Williams and Rev. W. H. Speucer. A poem overwhelming preponderence in favor of by Rev. J. F. Pettee was read. During the firing of a salute John A. Davis was instantly the latter. Instead of being upon the defensive, it will soon place its adversaries in that position, if they are not there already, and will take the aggressive as only a great party conscious of its own power and righteousness can. It will be as aggressive as it was in 1861, when Sumter was fired upon, in 1863, when Lee's army was shattered at Gettysburg and Fort Donelson surrendered, and in 1865, when the rebels laid down their arms at Appomattox. It has always been aggressive when the Democrats were in front of it, and will not now yield up the spirit that has always led it to victory. No, the Democrats want a "quiet campaign," but they shall not have it. It will be hotter for them than that climate Anderson wanted to go to. The members of the Republican Congressional Committee at Washington, who have remained there in order to complete arrangements for the publication and circulation of documents, report that advices from all parts of the country are favorable to a Republican campaign of unusual activity and of undoubted success.

THE Potter inquisition is still trying to find out to whom Mrs. Jenks dictated the so-called Sherman letter, or Anderson-Webber guarantee. They had her on the stand again on Saturday last. Their sucous efforts. The country has settled down to the conclusion that Mr. Sherman was not its author, and has but little curiosity to know who acted as her amannensis. Is it worth while for the members of the committee to spend their time and the appropriation in investigating what nobody cares anything about? Let Mrs. Jenks go home, gentlemen. For the sake of your own reputations and the welfare of Louisiana, let her go home. There will be elections in her State and yours next fall, and they will need the attention of all of you. Let her go home, and go yourselves.

The Art of Prolonging Life.

People generally desire long life and goo health. Sickness and premature death are almost always due to violations of the laws the masses are ignorant. If men knew better they would do better; but how can they avoid an evil that they know not of? While efforts are made through the public schools to give each child a so-called common English edu-cation, yet the children are permitted to grow up and enter upon the responsible duties of active life, profoundly ignorant of the structure of their own bodies, and the laws of physical being upon which their health and lives depend. They are sent to school and crammed with arithmetic, grammar, and geography, by teachers who, in many instances, have never studied physiology and hygiene. They are taught to locate the mountains and trace the rivers of foreign countries, but are never taught to locate the vital organs and glands of their own bodies, or trace the veins, arteries and nerves, in their various ramifications They are instructed in the flow of the tides and the course of the ocean currents, and the philosophy of winds and storms; but they have no correct conception of the relative effects upon their health of breathing pure or impure air, nor has their attention ever been called to the importance of keeping their bodies clean and healthy by regular bathing. The criminality of such neglect in teaching becomes apparent when we consider that the masses, ignorantly violating the laws of health, bring upon themselves sickness, suffering and death, that might otherwise be avoided. In this condition of things we welcome into being any work that is calculated to impart to the masses a knowledge of the structure of their own bodies, the laws of health, and the importance of observing those laws. We find Dr Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser to be be as peppery as Gen.
