Dill. Not at all. I against him personally, and really wish him legitimate calling. I cannot be regarded as an enemy of his family. I am friendly to his brother, who is a useful Metho dist preacher. I revere and love his father, whose life has been a useful one in the gospel ministry, and therefore a grand one, and who now, on this account, wears his gray hairs as a crown of honor. But because I wish the candidate for Governor well, am a friend of his brother, and have a profound everence and a sincere love for his father, is that any reason why I should cast my vote for Hon. A. H. Dill? Should I place my good wishes, my friendship, my love for another, above my love for my Country? Who will dare to urge such a reason why I should lay aside my conscientious political principles and vote for a man who is diametrically opposite to me in politics? Who will dare pproach me with such a plea? With my iews, I could not vote for my own brother if

Senator Dill, 1 am dragging up a dead and buried issue—the spirit that gave birth to the costly and bloody War of the Rebellion. Is that spirit dead and buried? No. Visit the South and see everywhere proofs of this fact. An intelligent Northern lay, on a recent visit to the South, said: "No one surrendered but General Lee." And that is true. Look at the Democratic Party in Congress when the power was again in its hands. We heard again of the fatal doctrine of State Rights. The impudent Southern claims upon the Treasury of the United States for indemnity for losses in the rebellious War of the South, and other political views—the very bane of our prosperity, if not of our existence as a Nation. We have the most fraternal feeling for our brethren of the South. We are ready to do all we can for their welfare, to pour out our treasure, for instance, to aid those who are suffering from that terrible scourge, the Yel-low Ferer ; but we do think that the time has not yet arrived when men who, if they had received their just deserts, wouldhave died as Traitors, ought to be trusted with power. Nor should we be willing to trust with power the men of the North who gave "aid and comfort" to those who fired on the Flag of the est Government on the face of the earth. It is is multed at the souther Traitors and in their best Government on the face of the earth. It is is multed at the souther Traitors and in their best Government on the face of the earth. It is impudent in Southern Traitors and in their Northern sympathisers to ask so soon for the trust of political power. Let them wait for long years till the Country is fully satisfied that their repentance for the loss of vast treasure and seas of blood in their dreadful attempt to destroy the Union, is sincere, and then ask humbly to be restored to places of t now. In this note of warning am I only putting up a man of straw? No, I am not. This boast has already been made : "There are thousands of Methodists, formerly Republicans, who will vote for Hon. A. H. Dill, and their votes will elect him." Several prominent Methodist preachers of Republican proclivities have publicly declared their purpose to vote for him. Others, it is believed, intend quietly to

to see this party succeed in our State this Fall. I desire this, among many other reasons, because I honestly believe that it saved the Union in the dark hour of the Rebellion, and because the welfare of our Country, for years to come, can alone be committed with safety when the time acome he methed this purpose to support Mr. Dill, such an indica-tion would be greatly to his advantage."

Ought I not to sound the cartainly will deny me this right, and I look upon it as a duty. Personally, I have nothing to gain or lose by the success of either Party. Voluntarily, therefore, unbought by any price, or unswayed by any selfish motive, I write this paper. When the time came he wrote this reply: "For years I have supported the Republican Party; more recently I have voted the Prohi-bition Ticket; I cannot now support a party which has favored Rum, Slavery and Rebel-lion." That preacher is a brave, true man. His brethren can safely commit their appoint-ments into his hands, and trust him in any place of responsibility, for he never will betray their interests. And it is said that a number of Methodist preachers, in view of securing
