Self-Reliance Necessary to Successi

Self-reliance, conjoined with promptitude in the executions of our undertakings, is indispensable to success. And yet multi-tudes live a life of vacilitation and consequent failure because they remain undetermined what to do, or having de that, have no confidence in the Such persous need to be assured, but this assurance can be obtained in no other way than by their own successes in whatever they may attempt themselves. If they le upon others, they not only become dis-satisfied with what they achieve, but the success of one achievement, in which they are entitled to but partial credit, is no guaranty to them, but, unaided, they will not fail in their very next experiment.
