Uneven Heels on Horses Shoes.

The advantage or disadvantage of having oblique heels on the fore or on the hind shoes, or on both, will vary in different cases. But there should be no difference, under any pretence whatever, between the outer and inner heel of the same shoe, in point of elevation. We know that a difference is frequently made for the purpose of preventing brushing, or probably for some imaginary reason; but it is highly improper, because in the long run it will be sure to induce lameness in the leg, in consequence of the weight of the body being thrown more on one side of the joint than on the other. It is just as barbarous and injudicious to shoe a horse on this plan as it would be to oblige a man to walk in a boot with one side of the heel double the thickness of the other. However, our interposition on behalf of humanity to the contrary, the notion will likely prevail that one side of the horse's shoe must be higher than the other, in order to prevent brushing; so as it has to be done it should be made in such a manner as to be least of practical utility. We may, and can, in many cases, effectually prevent a horse from cutting by using bevelled shoes; but this is not always to be trusted. We only prevent by this the sharp edge of the shoe coming in contact with the standing leg, which would otherwise be wounded by it. There are many horses that would still hit if they had no shoes on them, and if we could cut half the hoof away, they would still interfere. It is the position in which the standing leg is placed by nature, and the direction of the moving or passing leg, that produces the fault. We cannot alter nature, we can only bring art to remedy to a certain degree the natural defect. Smiths are very apt, on being told or seeing that a horse cuts, to shoe him "hook healed" as it is termed, on the inside, or to make his shoe together thicker on the inside than on the out. They tell you that by this mode they turn or twist the ankle farther out of the way of the passing leg. This is true, but they are not aware that by removing the ankle of the standing leg—say an inch out of the way—they bring the passing leg three inches nearer the standing one. To show the effect of this, let us take one place a bit of wood an inch thick under the inside of the tread of his shoe; if he does this by the right foot, he will find his body thrown out of equilibrium to the right. Let him in this position attempt to pass his left leg by the other, he will find it inclined to touch the standing leg. Now let him remove the piece of wood, and place it under his right foot, on the outside of his tread; he will find, though it may bring his ankle nearer the left leg, that leg in passing will be some inches away from it. His body is thrown out of equilibrium to the left; the left leg follows the body, and try as he will, he will find that he cannot bring it, in passing, close to the right standing leg.—National Live Stock Journal.

Work.

Dr. Charles Hodge says: "When a man joins a particular church, he is bound to identify himself with it; he must attend its services and co-operate in its measures." This is sound advice and we could but wish it was always taken. We see no reason why any man should imagine himself to be a bee, and go wandering from flower to flower. The old proverb that "a rolling stone never gathers moss," applies with great force to many a professed Christian. The prayer meeting has to be sustained. The Sabbath school must not go down. How is this to be accomplished unless some are willing to work? A Boston paper says a business man of that city, a member of the church, is in the habit of lurching down town. A few days since, as he was seated at a table in a restaurant, there was no stranger, and the proprietor accosted him with—"Do you see any change here?" "No." "Why, don't you notice that my bar is gone?" "Well," said the wandering disciple after staring a moment, "what is that for?" "Why, you see, I've been doing the tavern lately, and I have made up my mind that I can't afford this business any longer; so I've turned round." And then taking a card from his pocket he showed a list of men he was praying for, and then told, earnestly of the work he was doing. Then with the eagerness and confidence of a new-born enthusiasm, he said—"Now what you are doing?" No answer. The professed disciple was not doing anything. But the question sent an astonished man home to ask God to show him his work.

Farm Accounts.

When a farmer, at the end of a year, settles his store account, pays his smith bill with that of his teacher, doctor and preacher, which tax is generally in the rear, and if anything is left from the amount realized by the sale of his produce, that amount is called the profit; but if it falls short, then he has made nothing. That is not a correct estimate of results, for the bills have no connection with the cost of planting, except the smith bill. A merchant doing business on a capital of $10,000, wanting to obtain the results of the year's operation, takes an inventory of the unsold stock, the amount of available accounts, with the money on hand, after paying his store rent, his clerk hire, interest paid on borrowed money, and other expenses incidental to his business, but does not include the expense of supporting his family, which might, if extravagant, absorb all the profits, though it might be thirty or forty per cent. on the capital. There are a large number of farmers whose real estate, with all the working stock and farming implements, cannot be valued at more than $3,000, yet by their profits realized have raised, clothed and educated from five to ten children, which, to do this, must make a profit of thirty to fifty per cent. on the capital.

How to Choose a Horse.

An English paper tells us that the purchasers of horses for the French army always endeavor to obtain a first look at the animal when he is in the stable, noting if the animal supports himself equally well on all his legs, and, if one seems to yield, especially examining it. Attention is thus directed to the largeness of the pupil of the eye, which ought to be more dilated when in the stable than when exposed to light. After the animal has been let out of the stable, the eye ought to be again examined to see if the pupil has contracted; if not, the sight is feeble. Others, to test the power of vision, feign to strike the forehead with the hand. If the hollow over the eye be profound and the temple grey, old age is to be concluded. Wounds about the temple suggest attacks of staggers; and when the end of the nose presents circular scars, it may be concluded the horse has been twining with a cord to insure his quietness while being shod or having had to submit to some painful operation.

Sponge Gingerbread.—Melt a piece of butter the size of a hen's egg; mix it with a pint of nice molasses, one tablespoonful of ginger, and a quart of flour. Dissolve a heaping tablespoonful of soda in half a pint of milk, and mix it with the rest of the ingredients. The above makes a soft gingerbread—but if you wish a dough, add sufficient flour to enable you to roll out easily; roll about half an inch thick. Bake in a quick oven. We have found this recipe very convenient.

Tins farmers throughout the country have completed husking their corn.

Around the Fireside.

Changes in Life.

Change is the common feature of society of all life.

The world is like a magic lantern, or the shifting scenes of a panorama. Ten years to convert the population of schools into men and women, the young into fathers and matrons, make and mar fortunes, and bury the last generation but one.

Twenty years convert infants into lovers decide men's fortunes and distinctions, convert active men and women into crawling drivers, and bury all the preceding generations.

Thirty years raise an active generation from nonentity, change fascinating beauties into old women, convert lovers into grandfathers, and bury the active generation, or reduce them to decrepitude and imbecility.

Forty years, alas! change the face of all society. Infants are grown old, the bloom of youth and beauty has passed away, two active generations have been swept from the stage of life, names once cherished are forgotten, unsuspected candidates for fame have started from the exhaustless womb of nature.

And in fifty years—mature, ripe fifty years—a half century—what tremendous changes occur! How time writes her sublime wrinkles everywhere, in rock, river, forest, cities, hamlets, villages, in the nature of men, and the destinies and aspects of civilized society!

Let us pass to eighty years—and what do we desire and see to comfort us in the world? Our parents are gone; our children have passed away from us into all parts of the world to fight the grim and desperate battle of life. Our friends—where are they? We behold a world of which we know nothing, and to which we are unknown. We weep for the generations long gone by—for lovers, for parents, for children, for friends in the grave. We see everything turned upside down by the fickle hand of fortune and the absolute disposition of time. In a word, we behold the vanity of life, and are quite ready to lay down the poor burden and be gone.

THE GREAT CAUSE OF HUMAN MISERY.

Just Published, in a bound Book, Price six cents.

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment, and Radical Cure of Seminal Weakness, or Spermatorrhea, induced by Self-Abuse, Involuntary Emissions, Impotency, Nervous Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally; Consumption, Epilepsy, Fits, Mental and Physical Incapacity, &c.—by ROBERT J. CULVERWELL, M.D., author of "The Female Book," &c.

The well-known author, in this admirable treatise, clearly proves from his own experience that the awful consequences of Self-Abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, leeches, instruments, rings, or cordials; pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.
