RE-UNION .- About noon of Saturday. 7th ult., there was a family gathering at the Shaffaer homestead, in Airy Dale, which Mrs. Shaffaer surveyed with astonished eyes and happy heart. Her children, six in number -four with families-and two brothers, with their wives, formed a surprise party number ing twenty six-the juveniles footing up a dozen-which met in a joyous re-union After greetings and short converse, came the summons to dinner. Ordinary tables are said to "groan" upon such occasions, but we roundly assert that that table was utterly past groaning. Commiseration for its over burdened state was shown in the will with which the parties dined. Verily, toasts and speeches did much abound; the joke was cracked, the "yarn" was spun, and ever and anon the light of other days shone over the fleeting hours. Mr. Martin L. Shaffner gave an interesting and eloquent synopsis of the family history. The fun of the afternoon rose high, broke forth in a hotly contested game of "town-ball," and culminated in the astounding hubbub of a serenade to the newly doubled 'Squire. With singing and playing the evening wore on, and bedtime found all assured that a family re-union is a good thing, and full of the hope that their aged mother might have her days lengthened out, in happiness, to witness many such home gatherings. MIDDLE PENITENTIARY .- Money Suffient to Purchase the Site Raised by the Huntingdon People .- This from the Harrisburg Telegraph, of Saturday, we think is better than anything we can say about the Penitentiary, and being of a semi official character can be relied on as correct :

In conversation with a gentleman con-nected with the Middle Penitentiary Commis sion, this morning, a Telegraph reporter was informed that the citizens of Huntingdon had succeeded in raising the necessary funds to purchase the site for the new pen itentiary oposed to be erected at that place. It was at one time thought that the Huntingdon peo-ple did not have sufficient local spirit to aise the amount, but they are never wanting anything that will help to benefit the town and the original project will be carried through. Tyrone and Williamsport can hide their diminished heads—the new buildings will go to Huntingdon beyond a doubt.

The proposed site has been negotiated for, and all secured with the exception of one portion, which will be disposed of at sheriff's sale soon and bought by those who have the enitentiary matter in hand. It was rumored at one time that Capt. Hart, of this city, secretary of the Commission, in tended to remove to Huntingdon, but we are informed that such is not his intention. The Commissioner's next meeting will be

LITERARY NOTES .-

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR JANUARY, 1879 .-Harper's Magazine for January offers an unusual variety of interesting reading matter, with over ninety illustrations. The Number opens with an effectively illustrated paper, by W. H. Rideing, on Liverpool—"England's Great Seaport." S. G. W. Benjamin contributes the first of two profusely illustrated papers, entitled "Rambles in the South of France." of France

Besides these articles descriptive of places, there art will be especially pleased with Jennie J Young's "Cloisonne Enamel," with eight beauti meeting of the "Royal Agricultural" show full of carious and instructive information. Those interested in our early American literature will rejoice to see an almost forgotten poetess—Mrs. Maria Brooks, or "Maria del Occidente"—recalled from oblivion by Mrs. Gustafson's delightful paper, giving, through a variety of letters (from Colonel Brooks, a son of the poetess, the Southeys, R. H. Horne, and others), reminiscences of this remarkable author's brief career. Mrs. Brooks, the author of "Zophiel," a poem from which Mrs. Gustafson quotes largely, was pronounced by Southey "the most impassioned and most imaginative of all poetesses." Both literary and musical readers will be interested in the curious information given in the paper on Rousseau respecting his ion given in the paper on Rousseau respecting his

Edward Everett Hale's fine poem, "The Great esq., received by mail, from Springfield, III., the Deed of Wm.
