Some tramps are good singers. They strike a chord of wood.—Syracuse Sunday Times. They must be the ideal variety. Real tramps never saw a cord of wood.—Marlboro Times.

Mrs. Partington again—"Poor man!" said the old lady; "and so he's really gone at last! Ninety eight, was he? Dear, dear! to think how that if he'd lived two years more he'd have been a centurion!"—July.

"Why are you looking at me so intently, Alice?" said Theodore. "I was gazing at vacancy," replied Alice, dreamily, and yet there is a twinkle about her mouth that shows her appreciation of the young man.—Chicago Tribune.

A really neat tramp, when he puts a piece of custard pie in his inside coat pocket, always places the outside or crust rim in first, allowing the central point of the triangle to gracefully hang over the edge, after the manner of a bandanna handkerchief.—New Haven Register.

The Day of Algiers has been disappointed in gaining the consent of a French woman for whose hand he recently proposed. Unfortunately for the ardent lover she was already married. His Algerian Excellency was a day after the fair in more senses than one.—Boston Gazette.

When a man can make a living and wear the best clothes in the market by simply playing billiards, there is a poor encouragement for a young man to serve three or four years at the machinist or some other dirty trade, and not receive more than enough to pay his board.—Norr. Herald.

Mrs. Dunsbudder fed a tramp yesterday because he wore an old army coat of faded blue. "You went through the war?" said the sympathetic soul. "Yes; I was a drummer," and when the fellow reached here, all told, since April last, and only about 100 of these were from diphtheria. "Only about 100" is good.—N. Y. Medical Review.

The best and about the only way to get even with a treacherous mule—and who ever saw any other—is to take his shoes off, lead him on to smooth ice, and then blackguard him. He dare not indulge his natural propensity, and the venation of spirit exhibited in his intelligent countenance is really interesting.—Hackensack Republican.

There is a good rule never to forget the kindly deeds which others do to you, and never to remember those you do for them.—Husbandman.
