Upon opening the grave containing the remains of Benj. Singerly, who died and was buried in Pittsburgh, about two years ago, the body was found perfectly petrified, presenting the appearance of yellow marble. The body is represented as weighing over nine hundred pounds.

SENATOR BLAINE made a telling speech in the Senate, on Monday last, on the army bill. He poured hot shot into the ranks of the rebel brigadiers, and showed clearly that their cry of "soldiers at the polls" was all bosh. "Coffee-pot Wallace" made a sickly reply.

THE members of the Union League of rooms, South Broad street. The large building was handsomely decorated, inside and out, with flags and gas jets. The banquet is said to have been one of the finest ever given by the League.

FROM reliable information gathered by Government detectives, it is stated that Southern merchants have combined to exact double and treble prices for the com monest necessaries of life from the colored people of that region. This plan of systematic robbery, it is alleged, has much to do with the exodus of the colored population from the South.

SENATOR HILL, of Georgia, is in favor of calling things by their right name, as is proved, the other day, in the debate on the admission of Charles H. Bell, as a Senator from New Hampshire, when he said, "if the Governor of New Hampshire has the power to fill a vacancy in the Confederate Senate," etc. If President Hayes were only out of the way these Confederates would soon make laws to suit themselves when rebel war claims would be paid, rebel soldiers pensioned, and rebel money made as good as gold.

They say now that it is a Republican scheme to populate doubtful Northern States with a sufficient number of colored voters to preclude the possibility of their being carried by the Democrats at the next Presidential election. The rebels will not permit these people to vote in the South, and we see no good reason why they should not be brought North to assist in keeping the Government from falling into the hands of its enemies.

As AN evidence of the revival of business, the transactions at the Philadelphia Custom-house for March should be considered satisfactory. During that month the receipts amounted to $1,077,808 nearly $50,000 more than in March 1876 when many goods were passing through the Customs for exhibition at the Centennial. In noticing this agreeable fact the Inquirer remarks: "There is no longer any doubt that the tide of trade has fairly turned. For five years it ebbed and ebbed until it really seemed as though we should never, never get afloat again. Then came slack water, and now the waves of prosperity have begun to flow in, and in a little while all our enterprises, which have so long been stranded, will be afloat again."

On Tuesday of this week a cyclone struck the town of Collinsville, Mo., de stroying a large number of houses and injuring a number of persons. Yes, it is a cause of sadness to think of the famine-pinched thousands who reside in the large cities of our land—of the number that have been driven to commit crime through oil dress making, etc., that they might keep body and soul together. It is a matter of sur-prise that such a state of things should exist in this calightened nineteenth century, while there are millions of acres of unoccupied lands, while there are lovely, healthy valleys, like this of Rapid, capable of supporting thousands of happy and prosperous families. I can now see a herd of Antelope on the bank of the stream, one mile from the ranch. They have come to slake their thirst in its crystal waters. Something has frightened them; they are off, bounding over the prairie; they gain the edge of the bluffs, they stop and look back; now they are grazing. The cause of their fright, whatever it was, no longer exists; they are free. How different it is with the poor hollow-eyed seamstress of the tenement house! If she is pinched with hunger, if she gets insulted by the vultures of society, she cannot run away. . She has perhaps to support a sickly mother, and younger brother and sister. If she goes away what will become of them. The time is not far distant when this, our valley of Rapid, will nurture thousands of delicate and beautiful American girls, who will be as free as the Antelope that now skips over the plains;

The papers for the Trough Creek region leave the main line at Mill Creek, where, we are inclined to think, the trouble lies. The papers were mailed at this place in due time, and their nonarrival is due to carelessness of some perso in the employ of the Government who should at once resign a position they have proven themselves unfit to fill. New To-Day.

A Yankee came from way down East, Down where the people say They with a crowber start the Sun Upon the break of Day.

He came upon the raging sea—
A hand upon the deck
Of Captain Pinkham's "Sally Ann,"
That hailed from Kennebec. And now, with wonder in his eyes. He stood upon the pier, And to the Captain of his craft He shouted: "LOOK A-HERE!"

"G od gracious, Captain, can you tell Where all these heaps do victual? Hold on until I get a chunk Of pumpkin pie to whittle."

Then, with the shavings falling fast,
The Yankee strode along;
And up through Market street he went,
The wonder of the throng. At last the Yankee, knife and all,

Was suddenly brought to: For right before him TOWER HALL Majestic stood in view. "JERUSALEM! If this ain't rich"-

The Yankee then gave vent—
"IF I AIN'T UP ON BUNKER HILL
And here's the MONUMENT! "A sentincl is at the door,

But then he has no gun; And I'll go in, for BUNKER HILL IS NOT A PLACE TO RUN." And in he steps and asks the clerk
To tell him, if he knows,
"How MANY IN THE STRUGGLE FELL,

TO LEAVE THAT PILE OF CLOTHES? "What struggle?" said the wondering clerk;
"I know not what you mean,"
"Poy't?" said the Yankee, growing mad, "THEN YOU ARE JOLLY GREEN.

"Ain't this the spot where Yankees lieked The British nice and handy!
Ain't this the spot where grandsire fell

"Ain't this the monument we realed To keep in mind the story Of Warren, who in time of blood Wrote on the page of giory?"

'No!" said the Salesman, " 'TAIN'T the spot, For everybody knows That people here don't shed the r blood,

'Iwas soon explained-the Yankee saw The slight mistake he made; Taking as the SHAFT of LIBERTY

THE MONUMENT OF TRADE. "But then," he said, "'twas all the same,"

He still felt interested, And looking o'er the piles of Vests, Some shiners he invested. Yet still he wondered, still he gazed, And glowingly descanted, Till gazing at the piles of PANTS, For some of them he PANTED.

He bought a suit from top to toe, He sought again his ocean craft The clipper "Sally Ann." And proudly on the vessel's deck,
