IMPORTANT TO LANDLORDS -SELLING QUOR BY THE BOTTLE .- The following may be of value to landlords who have been in the habit of selling liquor by the bottle. The Perry Freeman says that Judge Junkin, at the The recent term of the county court, gave a caution to the hotel keepers about the practice of selling liquors by the bottle. He said the landlord was bound to know who were to use the liquor, and that no landlord had the right to sell a bottleful of liquor to a sober man who transfered it to those who were in the habit of becoming intoxicated, or to minors. It was always suspicious when a sober man bought a quart of whisky; he generally was employed to buy it for those to whom innkeepers would not or dared not sell it. Proof of its transfer and use to drunkards and minnors was sufficient cause for revoking the innkeeper's license. The court gave fair warning, and concluded that heroic measures must be taken to remedy the evil complained of. Grass has been thrown long enough without proper effect; stones must in the future be used, and their blows be made to tell.
