The Muses' Bower.

There's but One Pair of Stockings to Mend To-Night.

An old wife sat by the bright fire,
Swaying thoughtfully to and fro,
In an ancient chair, whose ready frame
The court on the second Monday of April
Stood a basket of worsted balls—a score.
The good man dozed—the latest news
Had been read in the morning paper,
And unheeded the kitchen, with creaking paw,
Rolled and tumbled the balls about.
Yet still sat the wife in the cheerful glare,
Smiling and frolic in the bright glare.
But soon a misty tear-drop came,
In her eye of faded blue,
Then trickled down in a narrow deep
Like a single drop of dew.
So deep was the channel, so silent the stream,
The good man saw not, but the dimmed eye-beam.

The Salvation Army.

ITS ORIGIN—ITS METHOD OF WORK—WHAT IT HAS DONE.

Persons who have had access to the English journals during the past two or three years, have been frequently struck with the graphic descriptions given of the doings and progress of a queer religious organization known as the "Salvation Army." Now that a detachment of the army has come into our midst, with its wares and methods of work so sharply in contrast with our own modes of evangelical work, and as they are likely to be an object of increasing interest for at least some time to come, it may not be amiss to give the readers of the JOURNAL a brief history of the origin of this singular organization, with some account of what it has already done, and what it proposes to do in connection with its visit to this country.

Famous Feats of Strength.

SOME OF THE REMARKABLE ATHLETES OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Among the Greeks the successful athlete was crowned with laurels and loaded down with wealth and honors. When Egeates, in the ninety second Olympiad, triumphant in games, entered Agriguntum, his native home, he was attended by an escort of 300 chariots, each drawn by two fine horses, and followed by the populace cheering and waving banners. Milo, who lived in India early in this century, six times won the palm at both the Olympic and Pythian games. He is said to have run a mile with a four-year-old ox upon his shoulders, and afterward killed the animal with a blow of his fist, and ate the entire carcass in one day! So great was his muscular power that he would sometimes bind a cord round his head and break it by the swelling and pressure of the veins. An ordinary meal for Milo was twenty pounds of meat, as much bread, and fifteen pints of wine. Polydamus, of Thessalia, was of prodigious strength and colossal height, and it is said, alone and without weapons, killed an enormous enraged lion. One day (it is reported) he seized a bull by one of the hind feet, and the animal creaked only by leaving the hoof in the grasp of the athlete. The Roman Emperor Maximianus was upward of eight feet in height, and like Milo, of Crotona, could squeeze to powder the hardest stone with his fingers and break the leg or jaw of a horse by a kick. His strength served him as a ring, and he won every day meal, twenty pounds of meat and an amphora of wine.

The Story-Teller.

A LIFE'S TORTURE.

I stood with my companion on the shore of the Niagara, down the steep bank of which I had carefully guided him at his earnest request. His eyes were fixed earnestly upon the stream, and so intently did he continue to gaze upon the waters which whirled dizzily about at our feet, that he failed to notice the reflection of his own face in the water. He was a man of middle age, with a stern, thoughtful expression, and a beard that had turned gray. He was dressed in a simple, practical manner, and his hands were clasped behind his back. He was looking intently at the water, and his face was set in a stern, thoughtful expression. He was looking intently at the water, and his face was set in a stern, thoughtful expression.

Select Miscellany.

Light in the Home.

The eminent English writer, Dr. Richardson, has written an article called "Light in the Home," which is a most interesting and valuable contribution to the subject of domestic illumination. He discusses the various methods of lighting the home, and the effects of different lights upon the human mind and body. He argues that the light of the sun is the best, and that artificial lights should be used only when necessary. He also discusses the importance of cleanliness and order in the home, and the effects of these things upon the health and happiness of the family.

Fun and Fancy.

Sleepy drows ought to be a winter tree. The domain of the baker during the holidays is dough, mainly.

Architecturally speaking, Sara Bernhardt is the misanthrope of the stage.

How to get married in x-cent style—borrow $10 to pay the minister.

When charity asks her dues she don't get when she asks you don't give her a cent.

If you make home too hot for your children they will skip out into the cold world.

An Ohio man met a weeping woman and kissed her tears away. The jury found a verdict of $3,800 for the plaintiff. It is far better to let her squall.

When a lady sends a cake to a church tea party she is mad all the evening if some one asks for another piece of her neighbor's cake and not of hers.

Use Onions.

The healthy properties of onions have never been fully understood. Lung and liver complaints are certainly benefited, often cured, by a free consumption of onions, either cooked or raw. Cold yields to them like magic. Don't be afraid of them. Taken at night all effluvia will be getting down to them with the sweat, and they will amply compensate for the trifling annoyance taken regularly they promote the health of the lungs and the digestive organs. An extract made by boiling down the juice of onions to a syrup, and taken as a medicine, answers the purpose very well, but fried, roasted, or boiled onions are better. Onions are a very cheap medicine, within every body's reach, and they are not by any means "bad to use" as the osty nostrums a neglect of their use may necessitate.

China has streets paved with granite blocks laid over three hundred years ago, and are as good as new. The contractors are dead.
