A Corn Experiment.

When I was a boy on my father's farm, I onee undertook a little experiment on my own account, and carried it through secretly for the purpose of enjoying the surprise it might create. With this view, as soon as father got through planting his corn, I selected and marked off, unknown to him, a small space near the centre of the field. To each stalk of the corn plant ed in this space I gave special attention, for the purpose of finding out how much each grain planted could be made to pro duce by giving it extra manure and extra hoeing. When the corn was gathered, the difference between my pet stalks and the rest of the field attracted my father's attention, and I remember how puzzled he was in trying to account for it. When, at length, I disclosed the secret, he in quired how much extra work and manure I had applied. Tell me this exactly, he said, and I can tell the value of the exper iment. I told him I had simply doubled what he had given to the rest of the field. After examining the result and comparing it with the rest of the field, he found that his yield was forty-four bushels to the acre, and mine at the rate of sixty five bushels. Now, said he, if extra culture and extra rinning." manure are good for single stalks, it must be good for the whole crop. So the next larger by several bushels than in my experiment; and he also found that the cost of are at present aware of.

What is Trouble?

A company of Southern ladies were one day assembled in a lady's parlor, when the conversation chanced to turn on the subject of earthly affliction. Each had her story of peculiar trial and bereavement to This is a question that has long been relate, except one pale, sad-looking woman discussed and plenty of advocates have whose lusterless eye and dejected air been found for each side.
