Keeping up the Farm.

What is the most efficient and cheapest mode for the general farmer to keep up the fertility of the farm? This question seems every year to become more and more important. Our farms in the older States, according to of tenderness, until the last one had dis each succeeding census, give reduced amount of grain per acre, notwithstanding died away. Then she turned and scanned the vast increased amount of phosphate the mounds that rose about her, clutching and other artificial fertilizers sold to the still tighter the fading bunch of dande farmers. Plants must have the necessary food to live on, the same as animals, as they cannot create an atom of any sub stance to support themselves. Hence, when there is a falling of in the product iveness of the soil, the farmer should first little one's father had died on shipboard ascertain what element is necessary to re store it and that substance in a definite quantity, because it is only a waste of money to apply what is not required. were gone she moved further to a neglect Such a course would lead to an economy ed, empty lot, and kneeling down she piled both of the money of the farmer and also up a mound of earth, whispering, as she of the elements of fertility. How many patted it and smoothed it with her chubby farmers buy expensive manufactured hand, "This won't be so awfully big as the manures when perhaps the very things others, I guess, but maybe it will be big they need lie waiting at their own doors? enough so that God will see it and think The applications of marl, lime, muck, that papa is buried here." Carefully she wood and coal ashes are sometimes attend trimmed the sides with the grass she ed with better results than the most ex- plucked, murmuring on : "And maybe it pensive phosphates. When these expen sive manures are applied where something else is needed, the farmer loses the money will sometime come back and-" invested, the labor of applying them and oftentimes.the crop, by not using the substance really required. The question seems now to arise. How shall we know what particular substance this or that soil needs to enable it to grow any particular crop? Farmers alone are expected to know their business without instruction, while men of all other professions and callings-the statesman, the soldier, jurist, physician, orator, &c-are educated for their special calling. some of whom spend years in studying. Virgin Homer and Horace, aid in solving the abstract problems of mathematics, in un raveling the marvelous mysteries of as 10 omy, and in acquiring the graces and flourishes of rhetoric. But where are the schools and colleges for the special instruc tion of the farmer in the mysteries pertaining to his calling? In not one of our common schools or colleges has the science of agriculture been taught as a distinct study or co ordinate branch of education Yet we all know agriculture is the great fundamental interest upon which all other interests depend. It feeds and clothes the whole world, and without it commerce would perish and mechanical industry would cease to exist. It is, therefore. highly important that the farmer be edu cated in all the mysteries pertaining to his calling, as it would enable him to judge and labor intelligently and benefit man kind. The farmer should know what each of his fields needs; he should know how crops grow and how they feed. Through the soil alone can he influence the amount of vegetable production, for the atmos phere and the light and heat of the suo are altogether beyond his control. Agri culture is the culture of the field The value of the field lies in the quality of its made; in the other a direct prayer is soil. No study can have a grander mate- addressed to the Divine Keeper and rial significance than the one which gives Savicur. us a knowledge of the causes of fertility and barrenness, and a knowledge of the

A correspondent of the Country Gen tleman, writing on the subject, says: I have also experimented with barley as a feed. When ground, the horses like it and it puts a glossy coat upon them. If fed whole they do not chew it sufficiently or relish it as well. Corn, barley and I could cry out to all those who have but bran in equal proportions make a whole. set a foot in the perilous flood. Could some and palatable food. In this way they hold their flesh, and a passive will—to see his destruction, good working condition all the year round.

COLIC IN HORSES .- One fruitful source of colic in horses is cracked corn. If but feel the body of the death out of which corn is to be fed use whole corn; it is I could cry, hourly with feebler outery, to much more likely to be perfectly masticated than cracked corn, and its imperfect mastication causes the colic. It is also un wise to feed grain to a hungry horse, for then a large portion is apt to be swallowed without being properly masticated. This half an hour earlier at night.

Making a Father's Grave. The Sandusky. Ohio, Register relates

"A little girl with tangled locks peep ing from under a calico hood, clad in a dress of chintz, loitered behind as the great dusty crowd moved out of the gates of Mount Adna the other day, after they had scattered their flowers and done honor to the dead. Dreamily she gazed after them, her eyes filled with a far-away look appeared, and the rattle of the drums had lions and grass that her chubby hand held. An old man came by and gently patted her curly head as he spoke her name, but she only shrank back still further, and when he told a passing stranger that the and been buried at sea, there was only a tear-drop in the child's eye to tell that she heard or knew the story. "But she paused as though it suddenly dawned upon her young mind that he rest ed beneath the waves, and the teardrops that sprung to her eyes moistened the lit tle bunch of dandelions that she planted among the grasses on the mound she had reared. When the sexton passed that way at night as he went to close the gates, he found the little one fast asleep, with her head pillowed on the mound."

"Now I Lay Me."

From the Churchman ] I presume that, except the Lord's Player, there is no form of petition as requently used throughout Christendom s that beginning, "Now I lay me down to sleep." Nor is it confined exclusively to the days of infancy and childhood. I knew a dear old man in Philadelphia, for many years a warden in one of the chief parishes there, who was heard, almost up to the time of his death, at the age of 84, repeating these same words as part of his daily evening devotions. And yet I am inclined, as well from observation as from inquiry, to believe that the majority of persons teaching and using this familiar prayer make a very serious mistake in one of its most important particulars, thereby departing from its original intent and form:

As usually said, it is as follows: "Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray the Lord my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake, I pray the Lord my soul to take." nereas it ought to be: "Now I lay me down to sleep; I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take."

One needs but compare the differences to see a most pregnant distinction between the two In the one a mere declaration is
