This date is for the latitude of Michigan and New York; in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, the applications should each be made two weeks earlier. The soap also destroys the pernicious bark-lice, and protects the trees from the old apple tree borer, Saperda Condida. It is so valuable that no orchardists can afford to neglect its use, especially on young trees. There is no better mode of application than to rub the tree trunks with a cloth which has first been dipped into the soap. Whenever the small patches of dead bark appear, or as soon as they are noticed in the Fall or early Spring, they should be cut out and the grubs killed. And of Mrs. Caudles, too, All designed to show that woman
Is a vixen and a shrew;
But we have our own opinion,

Which we give without reserve, That most husbands who are "caudled" Get no more than they deserve.

Woman has no voice in Congress,

Nor in councils of the State,

But she has a voice, and justly,

When her husband stays out late.

He has vowed to love and honor, And to cherish only her—

That he is at least unmindful Of the solemn vows he made

When upon the bridal altar
All her hopes in life she laid,
And if he unkindly leaves her,
Sad and lonely, night by night,
If she does not "give him Jesse,"
Then she does not serve him right.

Mercy on us! must a woman

Rise with early morning's light,

But to toil in household duties

From the break of day till night—

Getting Bobby combed and scoured,

Little Sally Ann in trim,

Windful of her husband's comfort

Mindful of her husband's comfort,

Mindful of her husband's comfort,
Sewing buttons on for him—
Clearing up the "helter-skelter"
That the children make at night—
Here and there and all around her
Making this and that thing right—
Quite as frugal as the ant is,
And as busy as the bee,
From the time she takes her breakfast
Till her husband comes to tea?
Must she do this unrewarded,
Having no approving smile,

Having no approving smile, With no husband's voice to cheer her,

And the evening hours beguile? If she must, and heeds no whispers That suggest the use of tongs, Should her lips be locked in silence When she contemplates her wrongs? No! by all that makes home happy, Woman's worth o'er all below!

We will answer for the women, And reiterate the "No," Until reason, truth, and justice Lead the husbands all aright, When there'll be no curtain lectures In the "voices of the night,"
